A free commutation ticket for one year to and from New York by boat will be given to each purchaser of a house. Inquire of A. & W. H. JACKSON, 82 Grand st., Brooklyn, E. D.; CHARLES C. CHARLES O'CONOR.

Mrs. Forrest Tells What She Knows and Thinks of His Action.

SHE DEFINES HER POSITION.

What Parke Godwin Remembers of the Introductory Interview in 1851.

Since the publication of the memorial which Mr. Charles O'Conor addressed to the Bar Association on Tuesday night various attempts have been made to evoke from Mrs. Forrest, better known now as Mrs. Catherine N. Sinclair, some expression of her opinion as to the article of a contemporary which called out the memorial, and also of the memorial itself. These attempts have met with but little success, Mrs. Sinclair having, it is said, refused to answer most questions addressed to her by "interviewers," laughed at some without replying and responded to others in a vague way. A reporter of the Brooklyn Argus must have been more persistent than any of his professional brethren who preceded him in her examination, or else Mrs. Sinclair, when he met her, was in a more communicative mood than she had been since the recital by Mr. O'Conor. However it may be, he seems to have been more successful than the others, and last evening published the following in proof of this:—

A representative of the Argus called upon Mrs. Sinclair yesterday and had a long interview with her on the subject of the differences between herself and her former counsellor, Mr. O'Conor. The lady spoke reluctantly, and before consenting to answer a question explained that the publication in the Times was an accidental one. She said:—"I was visited by a gentleman from the Times office. He had an incorrect version of my dealings with Mr. O'Conor. Learning from him that the Times intended to print something concerning the case, I made a brief statement giving the plain facts. I very much regretted that publicity was to be given to the matter, and at my request my brother-in-law, Mr. Sedley, called at the Times office, saw Mr. Jones, and secured from him a promise that nothing should be printed until further investigation was had. Mr. Jones was called suddenly to Washington by telegram, and it was owing to this accident that the matter found its way into print."

REPORTER—There is an impression that Mr. Sedley is connected with the Times.

MRS. SINCLAIR—Yes, and I think Mr. O'Conor wrote under that impression. Mr. Sedley has no direct nor indirect connection with that paper. He is at present engaged in writing a book.

REPORTER—Did you understand at any time during the progress of your litigation with Mr. Forrest that you for his services, whatever the final result?

MRS. SINCLAIR—I did not. In support of that denial I have much to say, but I prefer to wait in the hope of a possible investigation.

REPORTER—I understand that about the year 1851 you wrote a communication to the NEW YORK HERALD, stating that your cause was championed by Mr. O'Conor without fee or reward?

MRS. SINCLAIR—That is true. It came about in this way:—The HERALD printed an editorial in relation to the suit, intimating that in the end the lawyers would get all the money, no matter what should be the issue of the suit. Mr. Chase was not pleased with this. He said that I should refute the assertion of the HERALD. I was anxious to do so, and Mr. Chase brought me the draft of a letter which I copied and sent to the HERALD, and in which I stated that Mr. O'Conor defended me and prosecuted my suit without hope or expectation of fee or reward.

REPORTER—Mr. O'Conor conjectures that pecuniary embarrassment connected with the "Fonthill" estate prompted Mr. Forrest to bring a suit against you?

MRS. SINCLAIR—You will excuse me from discussing the case from that standpoint. I cannot imagine why Mr. O'Conor, with his intimate knowledge of this case, should have advanced any such theory.

REPORTER—Is the reason assigned by Mr. O'Conor the correct one?

MRS. SINCLAIR—It is not.

REPORTER—It is stated in some circles that after leaving Mr. Forrest you took refuge with one of your sisters.

MRS. SINCLAIR—The separation between Mr. Forrest and myself was by ourselves. It was mutually agreed upon months before it took place. Finally, when the time came, Mr. Forrest escorted me to the residence of Mr. Parke Godwin, where for a long time I made my home with my friend, Mrs. Godwin, who is a daughter of William Cullen Bryant.

REPORTER—Is Mr. O'Conor's statement of his account and its settlement correct?

MRS. SINCLAIR—No.

REPORTER—Have you receipts showing items charged for?

MRS. SINCLAIR—I have.

REPORTER—Will you permit their publication?

MRS. SINCLAIR—I must respectfully decline doing so for the present.

REPORTER—Mr. O'Conor intimates that you were prompted by some one to make the statement which first appeared in the Times?

MRS. SINCLAIR—I have already stated that the publication was a matter of surprise and regret to me. It was not, in my opinion, a question for the public to discuss. It is a matter strictly between Mr. O'Conor and myself. I had expressed to a very few of my relatives and dearest friends, but never with the slightest intention of making them public. Mr. O'Conor's fee was paid eight years ago. If I had desired to make my grievance known to the public I have had ample time to do so, but such was not my desire.

MY OPINION OF MR. O'CONOR'S ACTION

REPORTER—Mr. O'Conor states that he was called into the case by Mr. Nelson Chase, of the firm of Howland & Chase.

MRS. SINCLAIR—Mr. O'Conor was interested in the case and knew all about it before Mr. Chase had any idea of being connected with the suit. The lawyers who were first interested constituted the firm of Boardman & Benedict.

REPORTER—Mr. O'Conor says that "no supplementary proceedings or the like were ever instituted."

MRS. SINCLAIR—That is not correct. Supplementary proceedings were instituted, and there are records and evidence in abundance to prove it. There is one point upon which I desire to be clearly understood. I do not question—I never have questioned—Mr. O'Conor's legal right to exact a liberal fee in this case. The question is as to his moral right. Viewed in that light there is no legitimate ground on which I can regard his action in a complimentary or defensible light. Mr. O'Conor has been very many times bitterly attacked during his career, but this is the first time that he appears in print with defence or denial. If my statements are so immaterial and unfounded as he says they are why is he so evidently alarmed about them?

REPORTER—What further do you intend to do in the matter?

MRS. SINCLAIR—My action will be regulated entirely by the COURSE PURSUED BY THE BAR ASSOCIATION.

REPORTER—If requested by the Investigating Committee to appear, will you lay documents before them and furnish evidence in support of your statements?

MRS. SINCLAIR—Most assuredly. Mr. O'Conor demands an investigation. His long document in defence is studded with statements which I do not think the public will accept when a full investigation shall have been had. The "frailty of human memory" may possibly account for some of Mr. O'Conor's statements, but it will not account for all of his assertions.

At this point in the interview Mr. Henry Sedley entered Mrs. Sinclair's parlors and the conversation took a more general form. Mr. Sedley expressed himself as being opposed to any formal statement by Mrs. Sinclair at this time, and advised the lady to withhold documents, letters and receipts having important bearing upon the case until the Committee of the Bar Association had indicated the course they intended to pursue. Mr. Sedley spiritedly resented the imputation that he had been instrumental in giving Mrs. Sinclair's statement to the Times, and expressed surprise that the letter he had written to Mr. O'Conor marked "private" had been given to the public. Mr. Sedley has a theory in regard to the publication of this letter which may possibly be made public in connection with the full presentation of Mrs. Sinclair's case.

THE LETTER TO THE HERALD.

The following is the letter referred to in the foregoing interview as having been written by Mrs. Forrest to the editor of the HERALD in 1851:—

To JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Esq.:—

DEAR SIR—It is intimated in to-day's HERALD that Mr. Forrest and myself have been obliged to resort to the stage to obtain means of paying counsel. As to myself this is a mistake. I have never paid one cent to my attorneys or council. They know my inability and have never asked me for money. They have defended me without fee or reward, or the hope of it from any quarter, except my promise to pay them at some future time if I should chance to be able.

I know of no motive that actuates them in doing so much, expending so much and suffering so much, in my behalf, except their conviction of my purity and their generous zeal in behalf of a defenceless woman unjustly assailed.

I have not answered imputations against myself in this way, but feel it due to my counsel to make this statement.

I remain, dear sir, most respectfully yours,
CATHERINE N. FORREST.
IRVING HOUSE, Dec. 4, 1851.

WHAT MR. PARKE GODWIN REMEMBERS.

A HERALD reporter called on Mr. Parke Godwin at his residence, No. 19 West Thirty-seventh street, to procure from him a statement in relation to Mrs. Forrest's introduction by him to Charles O'Conor. He said that after the first intimation of the separation was given to him by Mrs. Forrest, who had come to his house, on Fourth street, near Broadway, legal proceedings followed. One afternoon Mrs. Forrest came down to his office in the Evening Post building and asked what she should do in her strait. Mr. Godwin accompanied her in her carriage to Mr. O'Conor's office, which at that time was opposite the spot in Nassau street now occupied by the Fourth National Bank. The reason Mr. Godwin thought of Mr. O'Conor was that, having noticed him in the courts, he considered him an acute lawyer and one calculated to sift with care so difficult a case as that which seemed to be growing out of the Forrest family complications. Previous to conducting Mrs. Forrest to his office he consulted Mr. O'Conor on the matter, and learned that the gentleman was averse to having anything to do with a matter of the kind, because it was out of his line of business altogether and a case with which he had no desire to be connected because of its nature. Still Mr. Godwin felt that Mr. O'Conor was

THE ONLY LAWYER TO WHOM HE COULD REFER

Mrs. Forrest in her difficulty, so he took her to the Nassau street office and introduced her to Mr. O'Conor. "In those days," said Mr. Godwin, "Mrs. Forrest was a very charming lady, a woman of fine presence. She stated her case to Mr. O'Conor. I was present at the interview, but it has passed out of memory so far that I cannot recall now what occurred to make Mr. O'Conor alter his determination as expressed to me and promise to act as her counsel. As to whether he was promised a fee, received a retainer or undertook the case gratuitously, I cannot now say. But I know that he then and there decided to act as Mrs. Forrest's counsel. I do not think, however, that he had any idea that the divorce suit and other complications which followed were at all likely to ensue."

WHO IS THE BETTER MAN?

A QUESTION THAT PROFESSORS JUDD AND O'NEIL DESIRED TO SETTLE, BUT WHOSE SOLUTION THE POLICE OPPOSED.

Near Macomb's Dam Bridge is located a bright, cheery looking house with green Venetian shutters varying its white surface and a long outhouse divided into stalls stretching out from it. This is Florence's Road House, and here there came on the day before yesterday a number of carriages crowded with gentlemen who, on their arrival, beguiled their moments of leisure at the bar. Carriage after carriage rolled up, and before long there was assembled quite a number of prominent New York sporting men. The occupants of occasional road wagons who strolled in viewed this gathering with curiosity and moved off to their vehicles with an impression that some event of sporting interest was on foot, but of what nature they were at a loss to determine. When about twenty equipages were drawn up before the door the party inside seemed to think their number complete, for after an exchange of salutations and a valedictory emptying of glasses they hurried into their respective vehicles and the whole line of carriages went up the road at a lively pace, freely scattering the Boulevard dust about and supplying all pedestrians with food for mental inquiry as to the character of the cortége. At Judge Smith's a temporary halt was called, and the inner man was again charged with refreshing beverages. Then the vehicles were set in motion once more and rolled rapidly along till they reached the junction of the Tremont road. Here stands Ittner's Hotel, a spacious structure, well known to roadmen, and here, in a spot cut off from the intrusion of the public gaze, arrangements had been made for a meeting between Professors Judd and O'Neil, whose rival claims to proficiency in the manly art has frequently been among sporting men. These two men have hitherto eschewed the charms of the ring and have been content to act as instructors in athletic arts. It appears that the friends and admirers of each have been urging them to meet in the ring and settle the debated question of superiority. Both, however, were loath to listen to the promptings of their associates and declared their repugnance to entering into any such affair. But the pressure of personal influence overcame their objections and a match between them was determined upon. The story of their proposed meeting found its way into sporting circles about town, but most frequently in a distorted shape. Some talked of a walking match, others of a wrestling contest, and only a few seemed aware of the real nature of the affair. A short time since, however, the meeting was fully determined upon, $500 being the stake for Judd and $50 were to be paid to O'Neil in case of being beaten. The police were dreaded, however, and the arrangements for the contest were made as private as possible. Florence's was to be the place of meeting, Ittner's the scene of the contest, and the greatest care was to be taken to guard against surprise by the authorities. Accordingly, the carriage drive to the place was made to assume, so far as it could, the appearance of a pleasure excursion, and no inkling was afforded the observer that a sporting event of no ordinary interest was about to occur. When Ittner's Hotel was reached the party alighted, and after the usual sojourn in the barroom a move was made to the proposed scene of the contest. Arrangements about seconds and an umpire had been made. Joe Coburn was appointed to act as Professor Judd's second, George Rooke was to officiate in the same capacity for O'Neil and John Dwyer was to assume the functions of umpire. Everything had been conducted in a spirit of good humored joviality and the best feeling prevailed among all present, although the respective merits of the two contestants supplied a constant topic for the connoisseurs of fistic proficiency. Everything was in readiness for the opening of the bout and the attention of the party was drawn entirely to the ring, when it was noticed that Mr. John Dwyer developed a sudden and unlooked for interest in something outside the Ittner domain. The gentlemen present, however, were not kept long in suspense, for the watcher quietly announced the fact that various wagons of police were in sight, coming over the brow of an adjacent hill, and declared his impressions to be in favor of an abandonment of the business on hand, and advised an orderly but general retreat. Most of the gathering seemed to regard the suggestion most favorably, and the scene of the proposed contest was forthwith vacated. Ittner's Hotel was not so full of guests as it had been some moments before when the police arrived, and those who were there stood at the bar with countenances indicative of the utmost innocence of motive and with bland smiles hailed the appearance of the guardians of the peace as a most delightful and unexpected surprise.

GLADIATORS.

Professor Miller, the Græco-Roman wrestler and swordsman, will give what he calls "a grand gladiatorial entertainment" at Thomas' Central Park Garden to-night. There will be sparring and fencing with broadsword and foil by a number of experts, professionals and amateurs, but the features of the programme are a glove encounter between Professor Miller and John Dwyer and a Græco-Roman contest between the former and M. Louis Carteron, champion wrestler of Lyons, France.

THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of the above organization, which was to have been held yesterday at the office of the Association, No. 93 Nassau street, was postponed, on account of Good Friday, until the 21st inst.

The first match of the season will take place at Creedmoor to-day for the Luther Badge. Mr. Brown, the Superintendent of the range, has deen directed by the Range Committee to strictly enforce the rule requiring persons using the range to display their badges of membership in the National Rifle Association, whether they are known to him or not. It has been found impossible, without such a precaution, to prevent the range being used by those whose membership has expired.

The Turf, Field and Farm "Racing Record" for 1876 is now ready for distribution. It is a handy book of reference, containing the summaries of all the racing of 1875, and the nominations in all the stakes to be run this year throughout this country.

IMPORTANT DECISION ON BETTING.

A bet of $100 a side was made last November in Jersey City between ex-Alderman Sheeran and Michael Murphy on the result of the fall election. Sheeran won the bet and the money was paid to him by the stakeholder. Murphy sued the stakeholder for his stake in a justice's court and obtained judgment. The case was appealed, and Judge Hoffman, in the Court of Common Pleas, rendered a decision yesterday affirming the decision of the Court below. He decided that all bets are void, and that the stakeholder is bound to return the money when demanded.

INSTRUCTIONS TO HIS WIDOW.

On Thursday evening, between eight and nine o'clock, fifteen persons assembled in the elegant library of the late A. T. Stewart, in Fifth avenue, to hear the last will and testament of the dead merchant read. It was a very solemn occasion, and terribly trying to the widowed lady of the deceased, who has not been for some time in the enjoyment of very good health. Among those present beside Mrs. Stewart were Mrs. Henry Hilton, Miss Cornelia Stewart, niece of the deceased; Mr. William Libbey, executor with Judge Hilton; Judge Henry E. Davies, of the firm of Davies & Whitehead; Judge Henry Hilton, Dr. E. E. Marcy, Surrogate D. C. Calvin, Dr. W. H. White, J. Lawrence Smith and William P. Smith, butler of deceased, to whom is left a legacy of $5,000, beside some other old and favored servants. Judge Hilton and Judge Davies alone spoke, and it was found that all necessary arrangements had been made, as three sets of witnesses were present to testify if necessary to the accuracy of the will and its two codicils. Accordingly when the document had been read in a very distinct and impressive tone by Judge Davies, it was then and there proved before the Surrogate.

The reading of the will did not take more than half an hour. At the close of the mournful duty the Surrogate stated that it would be admitted to probate without delay, as there was no flaw in it. At fifteen minutes past one o'clock yesterday afternoon the will arrived at the Surrogate's office in the New Court House to be recorded.

The details of the will are given below and will be found full of interest. In the last paragraph of it reference is made to legacies left to employés of ten and twenty years' standing respectively. There are among the 7,000 employés on the payroll of A. T. Stewart & Co. about fifty persons who have served the firm twenty years and over 100 persons who have been in its employ for the space of ten years.

THE WILL.

In the name of God, amen. I, Alexander T. Stewart, merchant, of the city and county of New York, being of sound mind, memory and understanding, do make, publish and declare this my last will and testament, viz.:—

First—All my property and estate, of any and every kind and description, and wherever situated, I give and devise and bequeath to my dear wife, Cornelia M. Stewart, her heirs and assigns forever.

Second—I specially appoint Henry Hilton, of the city of New York, to act for me and in behalf of my estate in managing, closing and winding up my partnership business and affairs, and I empower him in respect thereto as fully as I may or can or am authorized to do in any way by the articles of copartnership of the firm of Alexander T. Stewart & Co.

Further, I authorize and direct said Henry Hilton, while so acting in behalf of my estate, and in my place and stead, to exercise a sound discretion in bringing my said partnership affairs to a termination, and discharging all obligations therewith, trusting to his judgment that he will so act in respect thereto as to avoid as far as can be avoided any loss to those connected with me in business, for which service and as a mark of my regard I give to said Henry Hilton $1,000,000.

THE EXECUTORS.

MRS. STEWART'S FUTURE WORK.

To MY DEAR WIFE:—

It has been and is my intention to make provision for various public charities, but as any scheme of the kind I propose will need considerable thought and elaboration I have made my will with the codicils in the present shape to guard against any contingency, knowing I may rely upon your supplying all deficiencies on my part.

I hope and trust my life may be spared so that I may complete the various plans for the welfare of our fellow beings which I have already initiated; but should it be ruled otherwise, I must depend upon you, with such aid as you may call about you, to carry out what I have begun.

Our friend Judge Hilton will, I know, give you any assistance in his power, and to him I refer you for a general understanding of the various methods and plans which I have at times considered and discussed.

OTHER EMPLOYES TO BE REWARDED.

I am not unaware also of the fact that there are many who have served me faithfully and well in my business and otherwise who should be recognized and rewarded, but for whom I have as yet made no special provision.

Your own recollection, aided by Judge Hilton's knowledge on this subject, will doubtless bring these persons to your attention, and I feel satisfied that their claims will be justly considered by you.

Especially, however, I do desire you will ascertain the names of all such of my employés who have been with me for a period of ten years and upward.

And I request that to each of those who have been in my employment for a period of twenty years shall be paid $1,000, while to each of those who have been with me for ten years shall be paid $500.

ALEXANDER T. STEWART.

DOM PEDRO'S HERALD.

ARRIVAL OF THE BRAZILIAN CORVETTE NIETHEROY—THE EMPEROR TO ARRIVE TO-DAY—HIS TOUR IN THE COUNTRY.

The Brazilian steam corvette Nietheroy anchored off the Battery about noon yesterday after a passage of forty-six days from Rio Janeiro. She left that port on the 27th of February, and crossed the Equator in longitude 33 deg. (Greenwich) on the 16th of March. She experienced mild weather throughout the voyage, with the exception of a stiff blow on the 6th of April and a few heavy squalls that caught her last Wednesday off the mouth of the Delaware. On April 13 she passed the Western Sea of Boston in longitude 73 deg. 15 min., bound north.

The Nietheroy was built in Rio Janeiro in 1864, is 2 000 tons burden, mounts fourteen Whitworth rifled guns, carrying seventy-pound shot, and has a crew of 380 officers and men. The following is a list of her officers:—

Captain—Costa Azevedo.
Commander—Pereira Pinto.
First Lieutenants—Silva Guimaraes and Medeiros Pontes.
Second Lieutenants—Cordeiro da Graca, Polycarpo de Barros, Martins de Toledo, Fernandes d'Assumpcao, Machado da Cunha, Fonseca Lessa, Froes d'Azevedo.
Midshipmen—Azevedo Cavarol, Pinto Dias, Manso Sayão, Antonio Ayroza, Nerissimo de Mattos and Paula Leite.
First Surgeon—Dr. Florentino de Meneses.
Second Surgeon—Dr. Joaquin Marques.
Chaplain—Dr. Joao Crocco.
First Engineer—Januario da Silva.
Paymaster—Silveira Lemos.

In conversation with a HERALD representative the Captain said he had not come to New York in connection with the visit of the Emperor, but to represent the Brazilian flag at the centennial. After remaining a short time in New York to refit after the voyage the Nietheroy will leave for Philadelphia, where she will probably remain until after the centennial. The Captain added that he would like to have explained his reasons for not firing a salute in entering port. The day being Good Friday, and he being an officer of a Roman Catholic government, the required ceremonies of the Church had to be observed. He proposed to fire the appropriate salute to-day. In conclusion the Captain said that he intended to remain in New York waters until the Emperor Dom Pedro shall have arrived.

MEETING THE EMPEROR.

The Hevelius steamer, on which Dom Pedro is expected, is consigned to Busk & Jevons, No. 72 Beaver street, and is expected to arrive to-day. She will proceed directly to Martin's stores, Brooklyn, to unload her cargo, after stopping to permit the Emperor to disembark wherever he may choose to do so. Conselheiro Carvalho Borges, Brazilian Minister to this country, was at the St. James' Hotel yesterday perfecting arrangements for the reception of the Emperor. He peremptorily denied himself to all visitors whose business did not pertain to the matter in hand. Secretaries Taft and Robeson left Washington at nine o'clock yesterday morning, and arrived at the Fifth Avenue Hotel about five o'clock in the evening. Secretary Fish who on Thursday attended the funeral of Mr. Stewart remained in the city. These three members of the Cabinet will receive the distinguished guest on behalf of the government. They will proceed down the bay this morning on the Alert, at the express desire of the Brazilian Minister. They probably will be accompanied by Minister Borges and also by Mayor Wickham, ex-Governor Dix, William M. Evarts, William Cullen Bryant, Charles O'Conor and other prominent citizens of New York. Dom Pedro will probably attend a number of public entertainments during his stay here, and among those at which his presence is promised is that to be given for the benefit of St. John's Guild, at the Academy of Music, next Tuesday evening. A committee of leading citizens has been appointed to invite him and his suite to be present and witness the performance of "Der Freischutz." There is authority for saying that the invitation will undoubtedly be accepted. It is also expected that the Secretaries of State, War and Navy, Generals Sherman and Hancock, Admiral Rowan, Governor Tilden, Mayor Wickham and other distinguished guests will be present.

The programme of the Emperor's tour in the United States is as follows:—

To visit Utah and California, thence to return to be in time for the opening of the Exhibition on May 10. The ceremonies over the Emperor will make a tour through the coal and oil regions of Pennsylvania to Cincinnati, Louisville and the mammoth caves of Kentucky. Thence the party will proceed to St. Louis and descend the Mississippi River to New Orleans. From the Crescent City the Emperor will return to Philadelphia and spend fifteen days inspecting the Centennial Exhibition.

His Majesty will return to New York and enjoy the sail up the Hudson, visiting Saratoga and Niagara Falls, and then cross to Canada, going as far as Montreal. The city of Boston will be the next point of interest, whence His Majesty will sail for Europe on July 12.

HOLY WEEK.

OBSERVANCE OF GOOD FRIDAY—THE CHURCH SERVICES—PUBLIC RECOGNITION OF THE DAY.

Yesterday was observed all over the city as a day on which if business should not be entirely suspended yet had sufficient claim on account of its religious character to deprive it of the rush and push and scramble incidental to ordinary commercial life. The United States, State and city courts and the Produce, Cotton and Stock exchanges were closed, and, although the banks were open, very little business of importance was transacted. The day was not a legal holiday, but the sentiment which prevailed of respect to the belief in Christianity acted with nearly as much force in securing a cessation of everyday turmoil as if the observance of it were a legal necessity. Year after year there seems to be an increasing desire on the part of the public to mark this one day in the year on which all Christendom commemorates the Redeemer's final sacrifice for mankind as fitting to be set apart for religious devotion, or, at least, for rest from everyday toil. This sentiment prevailed yesterday very noticeably, and the fact that it was Good Friday was made evident in thousands of ways.

All the Catholic and some of the Episcopalian churches held services appropriate to the day. At Trinity church a large congregation assembled to assist at the morning devotions, which were very solemn. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix presided, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ogilby and the Rev. Messrs. Hitchings, Kember and Robinson. The Passion was read in a most impressive manner, and a brief, effective address was made by the rector.

In the Catholic churches the mass of the Presanctified was said in all the churches. At a certain portion of the service in each processions were formed, which proceeded to the repository and took therefrom the sacred Host, which had lain there during Maunday-Thursday, returning with it to the high altar. These services were all largely attended, and the practice of kissing the exposed cross was observed with religious fidelity. At St. Patrick's Cathedral the Rev. Father Henning preached at the morning service, and in the other churches sermons on the Passion were in nearly every instance delivered, either at the morning or afternoon service.

The office of "Tenebræ" was sung in the principal churches for the third and last time this Lent. The churches yesterday presented a strong contrast to the previous day, when the temporary altars were ablaze with lights and the sanctuaries were fragrant with the perfume of flowers. Yesterday the altars were bare and colorless, the sombre purple alone meeting the eye.

The Holy Week services close this morning with the blessing of the incense and fire—a fact which all good Catholics who have been observing the Lenten fast may be expected to rejoice at.

EASTER MUSIC.

Imposing Preparations by the Choirs.

THE PÆANS OF THE RESURRECTION.

Musical Services at all the Leading Churches.

The Festival of the Resurrection is the most joyous one in the calendar of the Christian Church. All denominations unite in a joyful celebration of the triumph of the Divine Founder of Christianity over death. The musical services to-morrow at the leading churches in New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City will be of the most imposing kind, and nearly every choir will be augmented and strengthened by chorus and orchestra.

ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL.

Morning Service—Mass No. 2, by Haydn; Veni Creator, by Speranza; offertory, soprano solo, with chorus, by Cherubini, sung by Mme. Bredelli; Ave Verum, by Mozart. NEW YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1876.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be cooler and clearing.

NOTICE TO COUNTRY NEWSDEALERS.—For prompt and regular delivery of the HERALD by fast mail trains orders must be sent direct to this office. Postage free.

ADVERTISERS would confer a favor upon us and benefit themselves by sending advertisements intended for the Sunday edition of the HERALD at the earliest possible hour to-day. Proper correction and classification are impossible if our patrons fail to consult their own interest and ours by sending in their advertisements early.

STEINBERGER'S TROUBLES are not clearly defined, according to the reports so far received. The world is waiting for the truth in this matter, and in the interval the fate of Samoa hangs in the balance.

THE LENTEN SEASON closes to-day, and to-morrow ushers in the joyous festival of the Resurrection. Imposing preparations are making in the churches for the celebration of the joyful event.

ALL THE REPORTS tend to confirm the theory that Russia is encouraging Servian rebellion and promising the Servians protection against Austria. If this is true it will not be long before the Eastern question will be again submitted to the arbitrament of arms.

SILVER.—The Sub-Treasury in this city is getting ready to exchange silver for "stamps" as soon as the bill which has passed both Houses of Congress becomes a law. It will doubtless be a pleasure to many people to hear the old time silver pieces jingling in their pockets once more.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA seems to have learned something from his visit to Europe, and it is now reported that he is undertaking an aggressive war to anticipate what Mr. Sumner would have called the annexation policy of Russia. This is a very bold thing for Persia, but it is not likely that it will stop Russian aggression in Central Asia.

NEW YORK CITY has suffered for many years from the inequalities of State taxation, but no combined effort was ever made to correct the evils of which we have justly complained. Now, however, the Union League Club have taken the matter up, and we print this morning their memorials to the Legislature citing the numerous instances of unequal distribution and asking for this city a representative on the Board of State Assessors. We trust the Legislature will concede to the metropolis a right which is too plain to be gainsaid.

IT IS AN AUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE that the Brazilian corvette Nietheroy, which is to represent the Empire at the Centennial, should arrive at this port just a day before the expected coming of the Emperor. This morning the party which is to receive His Majesty will go down the Bay to await the arrival of the Hevelius, and it is possible that before night Dom Pedro II. will be among the forty millions of sovereigns who rule the United States. We trust that his visit will be an agreeable one, and one thing is certain—he will find here more kings than it was ever his fortune to meet before.

THE HAYTIAN REVOLUTION makes some progress. Fighting seems to be going on all over the island, and Jacmel is threatened with bombardment. Some years ago two hostile batteries at that place, equipped with a gun each, kept firing at one another for months without anybody being hit. A passenger on one of the steamers which touch at that port seeing the fruitless endeavors of the combatants went ashore, sighted one of the guns, and, we believe, ended the war by the only shot which took effect during the struggle. A like lucky circumstance is about the only thing which will bring the present revolution to a close.

Free People and Their Governments—The Uprising in Chicago.

The people of Chicago seem to be undergoing an experience like our own with the Tweed-Tammany régime. The latest newspapers from Chicago bristle with reports of a monster mass meeting held on Tuesday evening. According to the always accurate and conservative Chicago Tribune this meeting numbered forty thousand persons. It was composed of men of all parties, or rather citizens without distinction of party, united in a war upon corruption and misgovernment. The republican Tribune and the democratic Times seem to vie with one another as to which will make the severest war upon the rings. Chicago, it seems, has fallen into the hands of a "corrupt ring," so organized as to perpetuate its power from year to year. This combination, like the infamous Tweed-Sweeny-Connolly cabal, ignores the public welfare and barters its votes to individuals and corporations. Its leaders seem to have learned the lesson of Tweed; for, according to the resolutions passed at this meeting, they encourage jobbing at the city's expense, share spoils with contractors, farm out offices to friends and favorites, outrage the ballot and make the government disgraceful and corrupt. To satisfy the ravenous and ever increasing demands of these rulers taxation has been increased until it has become "a synonym for confiscation." Worse than all, they tamper with the financial credit of the city, which hitherto has stood high, by issuing "certificates of indebtedness of doubtful legality." All of this falls with a peculiar severity upon Chicago, as the inhabitants of that devoted town, "while struggling to recover or lessen their losses by the fire and the panic, have been plundered through the forms of law." In the presence of this deplorable condition of affairs the honest citizens, "irrespective of party, nationality or condition," form a league, pledging themselves to "bury and forget all party distinctions and to act as one man for emancipation from the thraldom of official corruption and misrule, and for the restoration of a pure and honest administration of municipal affairs."

There is nothing so ennobling, nothing which shows so unmistakably the value of freedom in a government, as an uprising like this in Chicago. It shows that whenever the voice of the people finds expression it is in favor of purity and economy. It shows that there can never be in any of our American communities such a deadening of the public sense as to permit these crimes against the Commonwealth to be in the smallest degree condoned. It is the merit of our people that they are patient and slow to anger with their public servants. They do not hastily accept stories of universal corruption. Newspaper license is one thing, public opinion another, and public opinion can read between the lines of the press. In New York our people hesitated long before they dealt with Tweed and Sweeny as dishonest men. The people were accustomed to the torrents of defamation which ran from every hustings. As a consequence they were patient with Tweed—patient to a degree surprising to us now, as we look over the past seven years. But we must remember that seven years ago we knew nothing against the Tammany Ring. We did not know how deep into the system the polluting disease had permeated. We did not know that justice was bought and sold, that judges sat on the bench by degrading tenures and concessions, that even robbery had lost its caution as well as its shame. We did not know of Garvey and his thefts, of Ingersoll's robberies, of the transactions of the God-fearing Keyser. We did not know that Tweed was squandering millions upon favorites and followers, that Connolly and Sweeny were putting away millions as a preparation for flight. When the truth came in tangible shape, when the evidence was made so clear that nothing remained for the peculators but confession, defiance or exile, then New York arose as one man. Some of us perhaps will carry the recollections of the present into the next century, but no tale of fury or courage or majestic expression of the people's will can compare with the uprising of New York against Tammany. The courts were against the people until one intrepid judge joined them. All the patronage of the government, all the power of the party, all the money in the Treasury and the right to create as much money as was needed—all of this, and more, were arrayed against the people. But they won, as they will win in Chicago. It would be a sad day for democracy if they failed.

As we have said, we are convinced that the friends of reform will win in Chicago. It is not in the nature of things that they should lose. We read with pain, but we are sorry to say without astonishment, the propositions in some newspapers and in certain speeches at the meeting to give power to a mob, to have committees of "vigilance" and "public safety." These are names of evil omen. Committees of public safety recall the times of the French Revolution, when the guillotine superseded the ballot box and when Terror reigned in the place of Justice. Vigilance committees remind us of what was done twenty years ago in San Francisco. But that chapter in the history of the California metropolis in no sense does it honor. We can understand how an incensed community could rise in a night, take up arms and become a law to itself. We can understand how even conservative New York might have taken the Tammany thieves by the throat and strangled them. But the lawful way was the just way. New York, plundered as she was, is more respected to-day because of the patience and forbearance as well as the courage she displayed in her war upon the Ring. What was done was through the forms of law; and the lesson of the rise and fall of Tammany is that if in the beginning we were complaisant enough to permit men like Tweed to gain power, in the end we did not scruple to destroy them. We cannot too earnestly urge this upon our friends in Chicago. Their victory, to be enduring and honorable, must be stainless. One Commune revolution in Paris did more to harm republican government and deaden the confidence of society in the people's capacity for self-rule than could have been done by a dozen empires, with a Napoleon at the head of each. One vigilance committee in Chicago would do the credit of the city more injury than the operations of a dozen rings. The value of our victory over Tammany was that it was the triumph of truth over crime, of law and order over jobbery and revolution.

Therefore our whole heart goes out to Chicago in the noble work her people are doing. Above all we rejoice in the attitude of her independent newspapers. In those higher essentials of journalism, courage and integrity, Chicago may well rejoice in her press. And why, to broaden the theme, why would it not be well for those in the highest stations, for rulers like Grant, to listen well to the voice of the people as expressed and to anticipate a summons that may soon be addressed to them? So far as this administration is concerned the people are rapidly becoming as angry as the citizens of Chicago with their rulers. The revelations of Belknap's crimes, the gathering clouds that darken the Navy Department, the dishonor of Delano and Williams and Babcock, the influence of a crony like Shepherd and a brother like Orville over the President, the want of tone in the administration, the degradation of the Senate, ambassadors selling worthless mining shares to women and children in England, the treatment of the Indians and the soldiers, the mania for jobbery, petit larceny and defiance of law which spreads through all departments—all of this profoundly affects the country, and we may see such an uprising as was seen in New York five years ago and as is seen in Chicago to-day. We hear the signs from all quarters. While we are a patient people we are capable of terrible anger. This anger is fostered by a President who has no respect for public opinion, who protects every scamp and vagabond until the constable carries them into court, who even makes a merit of doing these things, as a duty he owes to "friends under fire." Well would it be for the President, well for his fame and for the country's peace, if he would rise to the dignity of comprehending the popular mind. Let him anticipate the wish in the heart of every true American—the wish that he would purify his administration, elevate the party and give us peace; for we are not at peace. The storm of war has given place to the plague of corruption. The President did much to allay the one; he can do much to remove the other. Let him listen to Chicago and be wise while it is time, wise before it is too late, not alone for his own fame, but for the discipline of his party and the honor of the Republic.

Mr. Stewart's Will.

Scarcely any feature in the news of the day will be scanned with more eager interest and curiosity than the column which gives the last will and testament of the richest merchant ever yet known in the history of our city, or perhaps in the history of any other city. It is, indeed, a subject somewhat attractive to the speculative fancy, how a man of recognized intelligence, of great methodical habits, with a disposition judiciously charitable, and without heirs in the ordinary sense, is likely to dispose of twenty millions of dollars—a wealth almost fabulous, even as fortunes go. But if the speculation was widely indulged the answer comes early, and it will disappoint the many friends of Mr. Stewart as well as the public, in so far as it practically does not make that disposition of his property which by his will he declares he wishes to have made. For the first time he appears in the light of one who hesitated till the opportunity was gone. He dreamed over magnificent schemes for the benefit of the city—public charities doubtless of a very practical nature—but he could not decide, and life passed away ere he could determine how to act or decide which of many schemes was most to his satisfaction. The loss of his ideas on this subject, if they are lost, is no small concern; for the man whose judgment and perception of details organized that human hive of a shop in which this great fortune was made was above all others the man who might have conceived and planned a public charity that would have been a benefit to the needy rather than an encouragement to the idle, and where the poor would not have been defrauded by the expenses of the organization. But all that grand opportunity, all the luxury of doing good on a scale not often afforded, is bequeathed to the millionnaire's wife as a holy duty, with his whole fortune as the means to carry out his wishes. In so far as the will is definite it shows the nature of the man. He remembers handsomely the friends of his early youth and repays amply the hospitality extended to him in early life, and to his constant friend and adviser, Judge Hilton, he is more magnificent than princes ever are. Few men get legacies of a million dollars, even with prospective services in view. Some thirty persons get legacies of from five to twenty thousand dollars, and the legacies directed to persons in his employ will certainly exhaust over a hundred thousand dollars, and it may even run to a quarter of a million.

Insanity and Divorce.

It seems to have been decided in Kentucky that a man may legally have two wives in that State; for it was held by Chancellor Bruce, in the Newcomb case, that at the time of the death of H. D. Newcomb, in 1874, Mrs. Cornelia W. Newcomb was his wife and entitled as such to a right of dower in his estate, and that Mary C. Smith or Newcomb was also his wife as far as was necessary to secure the legitimacy of her children, of which Newcomb was the father. Mrs. Newcomb the first became hopelessly insane in 1852 and is insane now. Many years after his wife became insane—nearly twenty years, apparently—Mr. Newcomb obtained a divorce and married again. Insanity was a ground of divorce by statute in Kentucky at the time; but a statute would hardly seem to be necessary in such a case, inasmuch as insanity of twenty years' duration is a good ground for divorce under the laws of every civilized country. By Newcomb's will the insane wife was well provided for and a large estate was left to the second wife and her children. But a son of the first wife, on the ground that the divorce was irregular, has had the will set aside, and thus the insane woman, whose only heir he is, secures the dower—about half a million dollars. For that sum this Kentucky gentleman assails his father's reputation and besmirches the name of his younger half-brothers and sisters. But this decision—that involves the possession of two wives by one man and a man's incapacity to obtain divorce for insanity—looks very like a decision destined to be set aside.

President Grant and the Succession.

The opinion that the President favors the nomination of Senator Conkling is supported by evidence which has appeared in the Washington correspondence of leading newspapers in all parts of the country, and is confirmed by strong intrinsic probabilities. Supposing him to have a choice it would be more likely to fall on Mr. Conkling than any other republican statesman. President Grant is influenced more than most men by his personal attachments, and no other friend has stood so faithfully by his side and defended him with so much courage and ability as Senator Conkling. The President, notwithstanding his imperturbable demeanor, is keenly sensitive to assaults on his character, as he virtually acknowledged in those almost passionate sentences of his second inaugural address, in which he spoke of the abuse which had been heaped upon him and alluded to his re-election as a vindication. He naturally feels more gratitude to Mr. Conkling than to Mr. Washburne, not so much because Mr. Conkling's services are recent as because they were rendered under more difficult circumstances. From the time General Grant began to make his mark in the army until his election as President he was the most popular man in the country, and Mr. Washburne hazarded nothing by supporting him. Mr. Conkling, on the other hand, has not been a fair weather friend, but has stood by the President through all the pelting of political storms, and has never flinched. Besides, he is more able and straightforward, as well as more steadfast, than any other supporter of the administration. President Grant's preference therefore accords with the fitness of things and is no enigma.

It is perfectly natural that the President should have a decided choice as to who shall succeed him. This desire may not be quite so strong as it is in hereditary governments, where ties of blood come into play, but still it is a strong motive with our American Presidents. Jefferson virtually designated Madison as his successor; Madison designated Monroe; Jackson designated Van Buren; Buchanan actively supported Breckinridge, who was nominated but not elected; and if Polk and Pierce had no influence on the succession it was because they were too feeble to cherish this kind of ambition. Harrison, Taylor and Lincoln, who died in office, had no opportunity to express such preferences, and Monroe and John Quincy Adams relinquished all power of the kind by tolerating in their Cabinets several men who were actively intriguing for the succession.

None of our really strong Presidents has kept aspirants in his Cabinet except in those instances where they have fixed upon one as a successor, and in such instances they never permitted their favorite to have a rival in the Cabinet. The famous breaking up of President Jackson's first Cabinet, in 1831, was forced by him because it contained two or three covert supporters of Mr. Calhoun, and he insisted that on the question of the succession the Cabinet should be a "unit." Two members anticipated his wishes and resigned voluntarily, and three others were forced out, the President writing them letters praising their official conduct, but insisting on the necessity of complete harmony among his counsellors. President Lincoln, in like manner, forced Secretary Chase to resign when he found that Chase was aiming to be his successor, and Mr. Seward once explained that he made his position secure by utterly renouncing all Presidential ambition and making his purpose known to Mr. Lincoln. President Grant has great examples enough to keep him in countenance if he should dissolve his Cabinet for the same reasons on which Jackson acted in dissolving his and on which Lincoln acted in getting rid of Chase.

President Grant will be thwarted in his attempts to give the Cincinnati nomination to Senator Conkling so long as he keeps at least three men in his Cabinet who are candidates themselves or are industriously favoring one of Mr. Conkling's rivals. If this idea has not already occurred to the President it will be suggested to him by Senator Cameron, now that the two are understood to be acting in concert. The political shrewdness and dexterity of Mr. Cameron will be a great assistance to the President in so shaping the canvass to promote the chances of Senator Conkling. The first thing to be done is to make the Cabinet what President Jackson insisted that his should be—a "unit." Secretary Fish, a wise, cautious, politic man, who knows how to wait and when to act, is likely to loom up as a candidate, and a strong one if he remains in the Cabinet. Secretary Bristow has long been an avowed candidate, and he is actively at work in his own interest with the immense patronage of his department. Postmaster General Jewell has not been much talked of as a candidate, but if he has entered into a league with Mr. Blaine he will be a powerful and effective coworker by means of the vastly ramified postal service, which comes in more immediate contact with the whole body of the people than any other branch of the officeholding interest. There is not a city, village or township in the United States where Mr. Jewell has not an agent in the local Postmaster, and if the President leaves this huge network of influence, which is spread over the whole country, in hostile hands, he will be frustrated in all his attempts to strengthen Mr. Conkling. Nobody should be surprised if we witness a dissolution of the Cabinet within the ensuing two weeks.

IF THE ALFONSIST GOVERNMENT succeeds in placing the Basque provinces on the same footing as the rest of Spain, allowing them to retain only their democratic municipal organization, it will be an achievement which will do much to strengthen the young King's throne; but failure will be the first step toward revolution. Let us hope, for the sake of peace in the future, that success is to crown the effort.

Wall Street Sales in Court.

With all that is said year in and year out on the subject of Wall street gambling and of the knavery that is popularly supposed to be the great attribute of all men in that centre of financial activity, it is remarkable how seldom, on the whole, the bargains made there come into court; how seldom the losers compel a resort to the law by their refusal to pay. Yet, as now decided, all the bargains of Wall street rest strictly on the honor of the men who make them. Except as to those inconsiderable transactions in which brokers purchase for their customers "on a margin," losers in Wall street are under no other obligation to pay than that of regard for their credit, their standing among their fellows, their pride—in short, their honor. Millions in value are bought and sold, hour by hour, and one man gives another a loose memorandum of the transaction—a paper without legal value—yet scarcely any one shirks his responsibility. Fortunes are lost in a moment; ruin impends and may be averted by the mere repudiation of the memorandum; yet it is the rarest of facts for such a repudiation to bring the parties into court. In the case of Taylor against Jay Gould, Taylor is nonsuited on the ground substantially that his contract has the defect common to Wall street contracts—that it did not meet the requirements of the law and is therefore void. It was doubtless thought that the Court might contemplate this case from that general standpoint of the law of contract which takes into consideration the usages peculiar to certain trades. In Wall street, for instance, where five minutes may be worth a million, the economy of time has been pushed to the utmost conceivable point. Should men stop to put in superfluous words, or to sign their names, they would lose great opportunities; and as men reduce the form of their papers under a pressure like this they push to an extreme degree their views as to what words are superfluous or may safely be dispensed with. They eventually, therefore, leave out what is necessary to make their memoranda legal contracts; but as it is done by consent and for mutual convenience no one takes advantage of the possibilities till there comes some person quite unlike other men in his views of honorable obligation. In the theories of the common law this view of the usages of Wall street would be of some value in the enforcement of such a contract, but the statute bars the way to its application in our courts. The words of the statute are:—"Every contract for the sale of any goods, chattels or things in action, for the price of fifty dollars or more, shall be void unless a note or memorandum of such contract be made in writing, and be subscribed by the parties to be charged thereby." In every sale where part of the money is not paid down, or part of the goods are not delivered, a memorandum meeting this description must be made, or the courts will not recognize the transaction. It is doubtful, however, whether Wall street will change its habits, or whether it will go on as usual, and simply ignore a difficulty that can only arise on exceptional occasions.

Monkey Tricks on Fourteenth Street.

We copy from the official organ of Mr. Kelly, the Tammany boss, the following poetical announcement:—

SOCIETY OF TAMMANY OR COLUMBIAN ORder.—Brothers—The annual meeting of the Institution will be held in the Council Chamber of the great Wigwam on MONDAY, the 17th instant, at half an hour after the setting of the sun. General and punctual attendance is requested. By order of AUGUSTUS SCHELL, Grand Sachem.
JOEL O. STEVENS, Secretary.
Manhattan Season of Blossoms, Fourth Moon; Year of Discovery, 384th; of Independence, 100th, and of the Institution the 87th.

The meaning of this notice is that the members of the dark lantern Know Nothing lodge which now controls the democratic party in this city will meet at the Tammany "Wigwam" and elect officers for the ensuing year. The "Wigwam" is a hall on Fourteenth street. The officers are known as "sachems," "wiskinskies" and "sagamores." They will "smoke the pipe of peace" and have "council fires" and indulge in many fandangoes. Whether they will yell and jump and brandish tomahawks and whoop we do not know, but we take it for granted that, as true Indians, they will go through the ceremony. It is to be regretted that this ceremony is not in public. The success of Moody and Sankey would be slight, indeed, compared with what would occur if it were only known that Mr. Schell, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Kelly, Mayor Wickham and their colleagues were to appear as Indians and give an exhibition of their tricks and games. What would be more attractive than our handsome Mayor going through an Indian "walk around" and swinging the threatening tomahawk? How enjoyable would be a speech from Mr. Schell on "The Season of Blossoms" and the fourth moon!

This would be harmless if the meeting did not go beyond these monkey tricks. There is no reason why the members of the Columbian Order should not meet in a dark lodge room and call themselves Indians or snakes or grasshoppers or whatever they please. There are minds who find a stimulus in these harmless amusements, and we do not grudge them their fun. If it were only a little nonsense no one would care. Under this mask of Indian talk about "moons" and "blossoms" there is hidden a desperate political ring, whose motives are to keep the democratic party in subservience to the will of one man and an oligarchy of men who have no aim but their own advancement. Tammany Hall is under the absolute control of the men who will go skipping and whooping around this lodge room on next Monday evening. These "sachems" who are to be elected have a control that makes any independent expression of democratic opinion impossible so long as they are in power. By their aid the Young Democracy were defeated six years ago, and Tweed was sustained in his usurped authority—an authority he used to rob the treasury of millions. But for the influence of these sachems Tweed would have been overthrown. The city would have been saved millions of money, not to speak of the scandals which came with them and which have dishonored the American name all over the world. This system still flourishes. Tweed has gone, but Kelly reigns in his stead. The policy of Tweed finds expression in the councils of the democratic party, so far as that policy stifles every honest expression of democratic judgment.

We do not say, because we are far from thinking, that Mr. Kelly would use his power to plunder the city. But the system which built up Tweed can break down Kelly and lift up another Tweed in his place. So long as the Tammany system continues Tweedism is not only possible but probable. The true way to make the democratic party in New York powerful and respected is for the leaders to dissolve their monkey show of an Order and throw open the government of the party to a convention of the members representing all who believe in democratic principles and desire to see them triumphant. As it is no interest is served by the Tammany Order but that of the "boss" who happens to have power—Tweed yesterday, Kelly to-day—and it may be a much worse man than even Tweed to-morrow. If Kelly had done this last autumn he would not have met with his dishonoring and disastrous defeat. If he does not do it now he will invite another defeat, which may cost his party not only the control of the State, but of the Union. Politics promise to run so close this fall that the vote of New York may decide the election in the country. If the democrats go into the fight with this tomfoolery of Tammany on their shoulders they will be beaten as ignominiously as they were beaten last November.

A Lost Opportunity.

The lecture of Mr. George William Curtis at Chickering Hall on Wednesday night was a fine example of Mr. Curtis at his best. The theme was "Woman," a theme that has inspired the noblest utterances of the human intellect. Mr. Curtis came into beautiful prominence as a teacher of virtue and manners and fashions and "how to behave." Listen to his soft, tender, wise words:—"We bewail our society—so giddy, so gross." "Young men content to drive fast horses and play billiards; young women in the finest dresses hobbling on high heeled shoes that pinch their feet into Chinese deformity, in bonds that squeeze their waists." After this, according to the report, Mr. Curtis gave "a very lovely and very graphic" description of a supper at which men half intoxicated toasted women, and then sung "We won't go home till morning." After this "lively and graphic" description Mr. Curtis rose into a higher strain. "In this audience before which I stand," he said, "there may be some Romeo sitting somewhere, his hand gently stealing where his hand ought not to be, and whispering, 'Ah, Juliet, Juliet, let that man on the platform say what he chooses; I know what you are made for—you are made to eat strawberries, sugar and cream.'" In conclusion, says the eloquent orator, "We have left the painted doll with Chesterfield and the club, and go forward, God helping us, to find the true woman in the free American home."

As our readers will observe, these bewitching extracts justify the praise we have bestowed upon Mr. Curtis as an authority on fashions and manners. When we read such a lecture filled with these noble sentiments; when we see a master of all that is good and fasionable and proper delighting to instruct the men and women of the day, we cannot but regret that he should have thrown himself away on a mere political convention at Syracuse. If Mr. Curtis had delivered this enticing essay to the Convention instead of his political harangue it would have been better for his fame, better for the harmony of the party. This is the aspect in which we delight to view Mr. Curtis. He is too fine a soul to be dragged in the mire of politics. He should go to the Convention at Cincinnati and deliver this lecture before it, teaching that rabble of schemers and politicians "how to behave." Then let him obey the will of the Convention at Syracuse, and vote for Conkling. This will have the effect of pleasing all parties—the sincere republicans of New York who desire the nomination of Mr. Conkling and that large body of delegates who will rejoice to hear this exquisite essayist dilate on the good, the proper, the beautiful and the true.

OUR NAVY.—Some idea of the weakness of the American navy may be formed from the review of its condition which we print this morning. Some light is thrown on Chief Constructor Hanscom's unpublished report to the Navy Department, and the whole subject will be found of great interest and importance.

ROYALIST TROUBLES AFTER THE ARREST OF STEINBERGER—THE KING DEPOSED BY THE PEOPLE—BROUGHT BACK BY BRITISH SAILORS—REJECTED BY THE CITIZENS, WHO EXPECT AID FROM AMERICA.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 14, 1876.

The accounts concerning Steinberger's trouble in Samoa are very conflicting. Additional private letters received by the Ada May and statements of passengers by that vessel are to the effect that the people and the Legislature, after Steinberger's arrest, deposed the King, banished him to a neighboring island and demanded Steinberger's release.

This was refused, and the British man-of-war Barracouta brought the King back to the capital, but the people declined to acknowledge him.

It is stated also that the English residents of the islands desire the annexation of Samoa, which will be accomplished if the United States do not interfere, and that Foster, the American Consul, backs up the British residents against his own countrymen; that the whole trouble arises from the interference of Steinberger with the British designs, and that the natives have great faith in the Americans and desire their protection.

LOSS OF A FISHING SCHOONER.

THE HENRIETTA GREENLEAF CAPSIZED AT SEA—FIVE LIVES LOST AND FIVE MEN MISSING.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 14, 1876.

Captain W. H. Greenleaf, of the schooner Henrietta Greenleaf, which was capsized and sunk on Friday, the 7th inst., arrived home last night with four men who were rescued from the vessel. The Greenleaf was a new vessel, and left this port on Thursday, the 6th inst., for her first trip. On Friday they experienced a terrific squall, which laid the vessel's masts even with the water and gave them no time to secure oars, water, food or clothing before quitting her. After launching the dories four of the crew were found missing, who, having been unable to reach the deck, were drowned in their berths. Their names are as follows:—Franklin Greenleaf, of this city; Alfred Short, of Norway; James Peters, of Prospect, N. S., and George Conners, fifteen years of age. Two dories left the vessel and kept company during Saturday, suffering greatly from cold and exposure. The railing of the dories was torn off and the vessel's wheelbox was picked up and used as paddles. On Saturday evening the dories separated, the wind blowing heavily. At five o'clock Freeman Crawford died from fatigue. He belonged to Westport, Me. Early on Sunday morning a sail was seen coming toward them. They succeeded in drawing the attention of the vessel. It proved to be the schooner Lizzie K. Clark, Captain Thomas Hodgdon, of this port, who rescued Captain Greenleaf, Lawrence Hardman, Philip McLoud, George Olsen and Charles Cook. The Clark laid by until daylight and cruised all day on Monday, hoping to pick up the other dory, but without success. The Clark then sailed for Halifax, where she arrived on Tuesday. The missing dory contains Joseph Gardiner, of Liverpool, N. S.; George Rowe, of East Gloucester, Mass.; John S. Tobie, of Norway; Bernard Jewett, of Westport, Me., and Charles Pattie, of Westport, Me.

The Greenleaf was owned by Captain Greenleaf and Andrew Leighton, and was valued at $10,000, with outfits; insured for $8,000 in the Mutual Fishing Insurance office of this city.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S PREFERENCE.

COLUMBIA, April 14, 1876.

The following despatch was sent to Senator Morton at Washington to-night:—

The Associated Press despatch, dated Columbia, April 13, saying—"The indications are that Governor Chamberlain will control the delegation, and the delegation will vote first for Mr. Bristow for President, second for Mr. Blaine, and in no case for Mr. Morton," is unauthorized and untrue. The delegation is controlled by no man and has expressed no preference.

ROBERT ELLIOTT,

IMPECUNIOUS STATESMEN.

SOUTH CAROLINA LEGISLATORS WITHOUT THEIR PAY—THEIR LANDLADIES BELLIGERENT.

COLUMBIA, April 14, 1876.

The Legislature, which had been in session since November, adjourned to-day. Many of the negro members from the coast counties are unable to leave without their pay, and the Treasurer is too poor to pay them. As a consequence the Ashantee boarding house women are in revolt. Most of the members were delegates to the late Republican Convention, and there was no money in that.

FRAUD ON CONGRESS.

PORTLAND, Me., April 14, 1876.

The Press will to-morrow morning declare that the claim recently allowed by the House of Representatives for land on the border of Aroostook county, under the treaty of 1842, is bogus, and that the appropriation of $35,000 is a steal. It does this on the authority of an army officer of high rank, who is entirely conversant with the facts.

DISTILLERS' ACQUITTED.

MILWAUKEE, April 14, 1876.

A verdict of not guilty was rendered on the trial of an indictment against Bergenthal Brothers, distillers, to-day, for violation of the revenue laws. Some excitement was caused in the city by the mistaken supposition that the defendants had got off in one of the recent cases against them; but this trial was on a charge which has been pending since November, 1874, when the defendants were running straight.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

The shock of an earthquake was felt in a large portion of St. Mary's county, Maryland, on Monday last. It consisted of a roaring, rumbling sound, accompanied by a heavy explosion, which led many to believe that the boiler of a sawmill in the vicinity had burst. The residents in the neighborhood were much alarmed. There was a similar shock in the same region last year.

The committee, it is understood, considered certain transactions at the Mare Island Navy Yard, and also matters which came before the Willis committee at Washington last February.

LINCOLN'S STATUE.

THE UNVEILING AT LINCOLN SQUARE YESTERDAY—CULMINATION OF A WORK INITIATED BY A COLORED WOMAN—CEREMONIES OF THE OCCASION—ADDRESS OF FRED. DOUGLASS.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

The unveiling of the Lincoln statue at Lincoln square, in the eastern portion of the city, was the main feature of to-day's legal holiday. The colored population were out in full force.

THE PROCESSION

thither was large, including colored troops, Knights Templar, Knights of St. Augustine, the Sons of Purity, the Sons of Levi, Good Samaritans, Labor League and other uniformed benevolent associations, accompanied by music. There was, previous to their arrival, an immense assemblage at the Park. The statue, covered with flags, was the great object of interest.

THE FIRST CONTRIBUTION to the statue fund was made on the morning after the assassination of President Lincoln, by Charlotte Scott, a colored woman, of Marietta, Ohio, who gave $5. The original cost of the monument, $17,000, and other incidental expenses, have all been paid by subscriptions by the colored people. The last Congress appropriated $3,000 for the pedestal, and the statue was allowed to pass the Custom House free of duty.

THE STATUE,

which is of bronze, is of colossal size, being twelve feet high, resting upon a pedestal ten feet high. It represents Mr. Lincoln standing erect, with the Proclamation of Emancipation in his left hand, while the right hand is outstretched over the kneeling figure of a slave, from whose limbs the shackles have just been freed. Upon the base of the monument is the word:—

EMANCIPATION.

There were on the speakers' stand the President, members of the Cabinet, Justices of the Supreme Court, foreign Ministers, Senators and Representatives, and other persons of prominence. After music by the Marine Band—"Hail, Columbia"—prayer and the reading of the Emancipation Proclamation, Professor Langston formally accepted the statue in behalf of the entire nation, and then called upon President Grant to unveil it.

THE UNVEILING.

Prolonged applause greeted the words of the speaker, and increased when the President stepped to the front and grasped the rope that was attached to the flag veiling the statue. The President gave one firm pull, and the starry banner glided down, and amid the deafening cheers of the multitude, the playing of music and the booming of cannon the beautiful monument stood unveiled.

A poem was read, composed by Miss Cornelia Ray, colored, of New York.

Frederick Douglass was then introduced amid applause, and delivered the oration, in the course of which he said:—

MR. DOUGLASS' ORATION.

Lincoln's great mission was to accomplish two things—first, to save his country from dismemberment, and second, to free his country from the great crime of slavery. To do one or the other or both he must have the earnest sympathy and the powerful co-operation of his loyal fellow countrymen. Without this his efforts must have been vain and utterly fruitless. Had he put the abolition of slavery before the salvation of the Union he would have inevitably driven from him a powerful class of the American people and rendered resistance to rebellion impossible. Viewed from the genuine abolition ground Mr. Lincoln seemed to-day cold, dull and indifferent; but measuring him by the sentiment of his country—a sentiment he was bound as a statesman to consult—he was swift, zealous, radical and determined. Though Mr. Lincoln shared the prejudices of his white fellow countrymen against the negro, it is hardly necessary to say that in his heart of hearts he loathed and hated slavery. He was willing while the South was loyal that it should have its pound of flesh, because he thought it was so nominated in the bond, but further than this no earthly power could make him go.

SCENES AND INCIDENTS AT THE UNVEILING—A REMINISCENCE OF UNCLE TOM'S CABIN—CONFEDERATES PRESENT—EFFECT OF DOUGLASS' ADDRESS.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

Standing alongside of General Logan on the rostrum at the unveiling of the Lincoln statue to-day, was Louis Clark alias George Harris, who saw the negro Uncle Tom whipped to death by Tom Canaday, of Garrett county, Kentucky. Immediately afterward he crossed the Ohio on the ice and gave the particulars to Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, upon which she framed her stirring drama of Uncle Tom's Cabin.

PRESIDENT GRANT

was as immovable as a statue, flanked on one side by ex-Vice President Hamlin, who served with Mr. Lincoln through his first term, and on the other by acting Vice President Ferry. During a pathetic passage of Fred Douglass' oration, Secretary Chandler, the old war Governor of Michigan, was observed to be moved to tears. The prominent present beside him were Senators Oglesby, of Illinois; Morton, of Indiana, and Bristow, of Kentucky. Many ex-Confederates also took part in the ceremonies, and prominently ex-Confederate Posmaster General Reagan and Doorkeeper Fitzhugh, of the Richmond Congress. Frequently during Mr. Douglass' reading of his oration those on the stage exclaimed, "Good! that's good!" which those commenting on it afterward said was hard upon those gentlemen and their friends.

CRITICISING THE STATUE.

A coterie of colored savans, criticising the bronze figure at Mr. Lincoln's feet in the statue group, said that the slave should not be there, as it would be an aggravation to the Southern people when they looked at it, and it should not have any chains upon it. The speaker was particularly indignant about this feature of the group.

SERIOUS FIRE.

MECHANICSBURG, Pa., April 14, 1876.

An incendiary fire broke out here at half-past ten o'clock this evening in the American House stable, destroying it, together with Totton's, D. W. Eberly's and Mrs. Kaufman's stables; a row of four brick houses, belonging to Mr. Johnson; Levi Merkel's residence, a three story brick house and stable, Mrs. Sadler's and James Long's stables, the school house and four other dwellings. Several other buildings were on fire, including the American House and Odd Fellows' Hall, but were saved. The fire at midnight was under control. The loss is estimated at between $30,000 and $40,000.

HORACE GREELEY'S HOME BURNED.

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y., April 14, 1876.

The old Greeley mansion in the woods, near this village, which was unoccupied and unfurnished and being repaired and refitted for the residence of Colonel and Mrs. Smith (Ida Greeley), was totally destroyed by fire this evening. The origin of the fire is not known.

OHIO COAL MINE VIOLENCE.

CLEVELAND, April 14, 1876.

A riot occurred near Massillon, Ohio, this morning, between the striking miners and green hands who were about to commence work in the mines. The Sheriff has gone to the mines with a strong posse.

INFAMOUS CRIME.

CLEVELAND, April 14, 1876.

A special despatch to the Cleveland Herald from Norwalk, Ohio, this morning, says:—"The Chronicle to-day charges G. B. Kuentz, a teacher in the German Roman Catholic school, with maintaining criminal intercourse with twelve girls between nine and twelve years of age. It is stated that Kuentz was detected in similar crimes some years ago, when teaching in a school of the West End Roman Catholic church, but the matter was hushed up. The indignation of the populace is very great, and if Kuentz, who has fled, should fall into the hands of the German citizens his life would pay the penalty."

DROWNED.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 14, 1876.

John White, captain of the boat Sarah Grimes, of White Haven, Conn., was drowned this morning in Staten Island Sound, off pier No. 2 Elizabethport. He was intoxicated and rolled off his boat. The body has been recovered.

FUNERAL OF MRS. GENERAL BUTLER.

LOWELL, Mass., April 14, 1876.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Butler, which took place in this city Fast Day, was one of the most impressive services ever held in the city. Distinguished people from all parts of the country were present to do homage to one whose years were full of usefulness and goodness. Among them were Governor Ames, of Mississippi; Judge Stanwood, of New Hampshire; Wendell Phillips, Collector Simmons, of Boston; United States Marshal Usher and lady; Colonel French, of Boston; Francis D. Moulton, of Brooklyn; Colonel De Kay, of New York; Colonel J. H. George, of Concord, N. H.; Dr. Hitchcock, General J. C. Palfrey, Captain Pearson, of the United States Navy; Mayor Scott, of Lowell, and Judge Nathan Crosby.

But not alone in that was the significance of the event. The common people of the city mingled with her neighbors to do reverence to the kindly, affectionate spirit which had departed. The services, and they were three in number, occupied the entire afternoon. The venerable Rev. Dr. Theo. Edson, of St. Ann's Episcopal church, conducted all the exercises. He spoke briefly at the house and offered prayer.

The remains, encased in an elegant broadcloth covered and silver mounted metallic casket, reposed in one of the parlors. The face and figure could be seen. The features wore the look of peaceful repose, and she seemed like one of life in a pleasant sleep. In her hand was held a rose. No other colors to contrast with the snow white robes were seen inside the satin folds, but upon the top of the casket rested a beautiful floral anchor and wreath. At the head, upon a black pedestal, was a beautiful crown. At the foot, upon a vine-draped pyramid, was a large white pillow of exotics, from which arose a crown bearing a cross. On either side was a tall cross of ivy, relieved by spears of wheat; before, an upright harp. Pendant to each side of the casket was a beautiful star, while from the chandelier hung a cross and star. Each piece was composed of the rarest flowers, and each a tribute of some near friend. Besides the large apartments were richly adorned with flowers, heavily lading the atmosphere of the mansion with their fragrance.

The gathering of relations and most intimate friends was very large. When the body was carried forth a line of over forty private and public carriages followed with friends to Saint Ann's. Crowds of people had assembled at respectful distance from the grounds, and a line of citizens extended to the church half a mile away. In and about the churchyard was an immense throng. The body of the church had been reserved, but the side sittings and aisles were crowded. Mrs. Butler had long been a communicant there, and her devoted pastor and friend with great feeling performed the burial service of the Episcopal Church.

He supplemented the usual form by delivering a short address, in which he spoke beautifully of the true nobility of her womanhood. His tender words to those who mourned were the outpouring of the pastor's spirit; in her Christian life he found a lesson for his hearers which he did not fail to impress upon them. Her beauties were those of the Christian daughter, wife and mother; still, the look should not be backward, but forward toward an eternal life with her and her God. The anthem from the Psalms over, the casket was taken from its elegant floral surroundings at the base of the pulpit and borne from the church, preceded by the clergyman and followed by the funeral procession.

The pallbearers were Messrs. James P. Frances, Dr. S. Richardson, W. A. Burke, Charles P. Talbott, James S. Ludlam and Charles Hovey. The cortege moved to the old Dracut burying ground on the north bank of the Merrimac, whither a large company had gone before, and where hundreds reverently listened to the final services. At the grave were additional floral tributes. The choir of St. Ann's was present and took part in the exercises. Then the last look was taken and the body committed to its final rest.

MRS. JERSEY'S DEATH.

The remarkable circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Jane Jersey, beside exciting a great deal of interest in this city, have thrown the people of Rockland county into a fever such as they were in at the time of the murder of Mrs. Hujus at Nanuet. For some time it was believed that Dr. Gerard B. Hammond, who died a few days after the news of the death of Mrs. Jersey was received, was instrumental in bringing about that result, and had committed suicide to escape the punishment which would follow the discovery of his crime. That hypothesis is now proven to have been false. All the evidence given at the inquest as to the cause of Dr. Hammond's death indicates that event to have resulted from apoplexy, caused by the continuous use of hydrate of chloral. It is also proven that upon the day that Mrs. Jersey started upon her journey on the steamer Cuba Dr. Hammond was in the village of Spring Valley, in attendance upon patients, and that on the day of the lady's death he was a guest at a dinner in the house of one of the wealthiest and most respected residents of Ramapo township. Thus the blot cast upon the character of Dr. Hammond immediately after his death has been removed. He is proven not to have been the person who bought Mrs. Jersey's ticket for the voyage to Port Royal, and who represented himself on the steamship Cuba as "Dr. Hamilton." Who and where, then is the reputed Doctor Hamilton? A detective engaged to find him wrote to his employers on Wednesday that "the Doctor, I think, is now not far away from the City Hall." In concluding his letter the detective says, speaking of the Doctor and the money ($7,500) taken from the person of Mrs. Jersey:—"I feel certain that I can put my hand on and produce the person who was on the steamer and attended Mrs. Jersey as 'Doctor,' and if you instruct me to do so will undertake it. What good result would follow from it I cannot say. No conviction could be had for murder, because, the body being buried in the sea, there is no proof possible that murder was committed. I am satisfied that that person took the money. How much prospect there is that he has it now or could be made to produce it you can judge as well as I."

The present theory of this mysterious case is that Mrs. Jersey, coming to this city, became acquainted with some unscrupulous persons who soon learned that she was possessed of a goodly sum of money. Her new and unscrupulous acquaintances upon learning of her intention to go to Florida via Port Royal determined to possess her funds for their own, and this determination was fulfilled through the death of the unfortunate woman on the steamship Cuba.

This theory will never be tested, however, unless that detective arrests Dr. Hamilton.

GEORGE ELIOT.

The Greatest of Living Novelists.

HER ANTECEDENTS AND LITERARY BEGINNINGS.

Her Different Works and the Price She Has Received for Them.

Her Connubial Romance Stranger Than Her Fiction.

Her Personal Appearance and Mode of Writing.

LONDON, March 31, 1876.

George Eliot is, by all odds, the greatest living writer of fiction. Her name—her pen name, at least—is known wherever the English language is spoken. In creative genius, in knowledge of human nature, in power of analysis, in richness and exactness of expression, it is fair to say she has been equalled by no woman, and by very few men.

A RENOWNED RECLUSE.

Famous as her works are, long as they have shone under the glow of her reputation, their author, as a woman, has never emerged from the strictest privacy. Many who have read her books with delight, who snatch at every line from her pen, hardly remember her real name. There is no reason why they should, since to the whole world, a few intimate friends excepted, she is simply a mind. Were she to walk from the Bank to Trafalgar square and back six times a day, I venture to doubt if she would meet any one who would recognize her as the first novelist of the time. Thousands upon thousands would know George Eliot, the writer, but not George Eliot, the woman.

The appearance in parts of her last novel, "Daniel Deronda," has again set cultured folks to thinking of her, and wondering what manner of mortal she is who has so mastered the mysteries of the human heart and so assimilated the treasures of the English tongue.

HER ORIGIN AND PARENTAGE.

George Eliot is now the wife of George Henry Lewes, the littérateur. Her maiden name was Evans, her given name being Marian C., not Mary Ann, as she has often been called.

She was born in the north of England, in a town of Yorkshire, I think, in the spring of 1820. She is, therefore, nearly fifty-six. Very little is known of her early history. She seldom if ever refers to it herself; anything like a biographical sketch of her has never been written, and indeed the facts of her life in any positively authoritative form are unprocurable.

She is reputed, however, to be the only child of a dissenting clergyman, a graduate of Oxford, a man of original mind and much learning. He first took orders and preached for a while in the Established Church, and would have prospered there in all probability had he not been led to doubt his creed, and, finally, to resign his charge. Practically this was an unwise step, but, unlike many curates over here, being unable to profess what he could not believe, he avowed his heterodoxy and dissolved his clerical connections. He was soon called to take the pulpit of a Presbyterian chapel in a town at some distance from the one he had officiated in, and he accepted the call, though at a much smaller salary than he had formerly received.

Not long after he fell in love with a member of his congregation as poor as himself, and with the unworldly wisdom that marks most ministers of the Gospel promptly made her his wife, under the theologico-sentimental delusion that material things would be provided by spiritual agencies. They had a long and severe struggle with fortune.

A PRECOCIOUS CHILD.

A daughter—the renowned novelist—was born to them, adding at once to their happiness and hindrances. The child was very precocious, though not inclined to the routine studies of the schools she attended. She was a great reader. She had an understanding far beyond her years. Her father spent much time and more money than he could afford on her education; but had the good luck, when Marian was twelve, to inherit a few hundreds of pounds from an uncle who had had the kindness to die in this city. The child evinced at a very early age a talent for composition, which so delighted her father that he encouraged her in every way. He took the greatest pains to form her style—he was a strong and graceful writer himself—and with the best effect; for before she was sixteen she expressed her thoughts on paper with a nervousness and point that men of five and twenty seldom equal.

It is said that she has never written a line of bombast, which is very remarkable, since the most distinguished authors have had their period of floridity and rhetorical fatuity as they have had mumps and measles and other diseases, whether literary or physical, that are incident to juvenility.

WRITING FOR PRINT.

When Marian was eighteen it is said that she began to write for the newspapers and periodicals here, and earned considerable money. She had no friends in the metropolis. She merely sent her manuscripts, with the request that they should be returned to her address if not acceptable. Some of them went back, though not very many, and her unexpected success gave her hope and stimulated her to renewed effort. She revealed nothing of her privacy. She even concealed her sex under the pseudonyme she still bears, and the editors and publishers with whom she dealt had no idea of her feminineness. She was enabled to be of much assistance to her parents by her slender earnings and to repay them substantially for what they had done for her.

She had barely reached her twentieth year when she lost her father, and her mother soon followed him. Having no further ties she decided to come here and lead a literary life. By that time she had become acquainted through correspondence with several families, and one of them cordially invited her to make their home her home. She set to work immediately on her arrival contributing poems, stories, sketches and essays to the minor publications. Most of her writings were printed anonymously, and as they were done only for pounds, shillings and pence she has never acknowledged them. She grew steadily in ability and reputation, and she labored supremely; but her reputation, naturally for one so young, was confined almost entirely to those who paid her and who knew her personally.

HER FIRST STORIES.

The first work that attracted any general attention here was "Scenes from Clerical Life." They had, I believe, appeared separately before they were put between covers. They are very noticeable, and have the unmistakable stamp of her strong intellect, though they are far inferior to any of her subsequent writings. She was something over thirty when the "Scenes" were published. They made the name of George Eliot familiar to a number of cultured people, but the sale was not large. I have understood that the author disposed of the contents of the volume outright for £150 ($750).

Two or three years later she produced "Silas Marner," so marked an advance upon her previous work that many of her admirers, even to this day, consider it one of her very best stories. It is so full of strength and sadness, as all her writing is, that the reader constantly feels its eloquent force and penetrating pain. Despite this, persons read and reread it, for it has the fascination of nature in her dark moods. She realized from "Marner," I have been told, £300 ($1,500), exclusive, of course, of what she has received, since she achieved great fame, from the sale of her collected works.

HER LATER WORKS.

"Adam Bede," published in 1858, carried her name across the Channel and the Atlantic. It was translated into French and German, and many editions were sold in the United States. It laid the foundation of her celebrity, of her literary fortune; for from that date she has been able to command publishers instead of yielding to them, as most authors have to do throughout their lives. Conscious of the power of "Adam Bede," she declined to dispose of it except at a fixed royalty. In this she found her advantage, for within three years from its first appearance she had got for it £1,500 ($7,500), and fully as much more, no doubt, in the succeeding five.

The next year "The Mill on the Floss" was published. It had been partially written when "Adam Bede" came out, and met with a most cordial reception. She had numerous bids for it from rival publishers, and finally accepted £2,000 ($10,000) down, with a certain percentage after the sale of a given number of copies.

Then came "Romola" (1863), "Felix Holt" (1866), "The Spanish Gypsy" (1868), "Middlemarch" (1873), and, a few months after, "The Legend of Jubal and Other Poems."

was a new departure, being an Italian tale, the scene laid in Florence during the fifteenth century. It is one of her most artistic novels, if not her most artistic. Its atmosphere is completely Italian; the illusion is perfect. It reads like a translation from the literature of the time. A finer and truer representation and analysis of Girolamo Savonarola have never been given. "Romola" is a beautiful creation, and Tito Melema one of the most original, highly finished, wholly rounded characters that the fiction of the century has furnished.

One would think the author must have spent years in Florence and its libraries to so saturate herself with the mediæval spirit and with the quality of the people. I used to believe her studies had been made on the banks of the Arno until recently, when spending a winter in the Tuscan capital, I learned from those who knew that she had done her readings here and gone there, so to speak, merely to catch the air and to verify her learning. She was in Florence, I was told, but two months, though she was extremely busy during the time, making the best use of every leisure quarter of an hour.

"Felix Holt" was a return to her accustomed channel, and is remarkable for containing more light, or less darkness, than its predecessors.

A PROFESSIONAL WEAKNESS.

"The Spanish Gypsy" was her first acknowledged essay in verse, and it was not very successful.

Like so many artists, and meaner mortals likewise, she is most ambitious to shine in what she is least fitted.

Prose writers believe they should be poets; poets that they should be painters; painters that they should be poets; orators that they should be financiers; merchants that they should be authors, and so on endlessly. We care less for what we know we can do well than for what we think or try to think we can do well.

George Eliot, having demonstated her eminent capacity as a novelist, is anxious to prove herself a poet, and she has not been able to. She is a poet in spirit, thought and sympathy, though not, in any high sense, in the form commonly accepted. The limitations of rhyme and rhythm fetter her expression, cramp her imagination, hamper her genius. She would rather be a poet than anything else, and her failure to be recognized as such troubles her sorely.

Oddly, yet naturally enough, she is persuaded that "The Spanish Gypsy" is her greatest performance—greater than "Romola," greater than "Middlemarch," greater than "Daniel Deronda."

She received, I am informed, £4,000 ($20,000) for the "Gypsy," and the firm which paid it has never got its money back. The public that so enjoys her stories cares comparatively little for her poetry, and for once the public is right.

GOLDEN INK.

"Middlemarch," is generally considered, up to the present, her best work. It has been predicted that "Deronda" will excel it; but it is yet too early to hazard an opinion. For "Middlemarch" its writer obtained £8,000 ($40,000) on the delivery of the manuscript, and I hear its publishers have already cleared £12,000 on it, while the sale continues to be large and steady.

George Eliot's market goes regularly upward. I am told, by one who claims to be correctly informed, that she received for "Deronda" £12,000 ($60,000), with an arrangement as to future percentage that will be likely in the end to yield her at least £4,000 more. Who shall say that literature is unremunerative when a single work is capable of bringing $80,000, the interest of which would be an independence in the United States, and something positively handsome over here? Such instances, however, are purely exceptional. Great genius for many years has been convertible into gold on both sides of the Atlantic. Even talent is often very fairly paid, though it may starve, unless it have the popular element, and is, on the whole, more likely to grow lean than fat in any and every quarter of the globe.

AN ACTUAL ROMANCE.

George Eliot has had quite a romance in her life, and still has it in full force. When she published "Adam Bede," if I remember rightly, it attracted the attention of George Henry Lewes, among other critics. He pronounced it a work of consummate genius, and was surprised, on inquiry, to learn that its author was poor and a very shy, retiring person, who was averse to receiving any of her many literary admirers. The intelligence piqued his curiosity. He was more desirous than ever to know her, and he sought an introduction, but in vain. He wrote to her and proffered her any practical assistance that lay in his power—influence with reviews, publishers and the like. She thanked him kindly, and this led to a correspondence in which he displayed such delicacy and chivalry that she consented at last to meet him.

A CONNUBIAL DILEMMA.

At this time Lewes was legally a husband and actually a widower. Then nearly forty-two, he had married, a number of years before, a handsome but eccentric woman, who soon wearied of the conjugal yoke and eloped with a lover. Becoming contrite, she begged to be restored to marital favor, and Lewes, with great generosity, forgave her usually unpardonable offence. Their second matrimonial experience was not unpleasant until, with a ficklessness she could not control, she ran away with another man. Her husband then wanted a divorce; but, having condoned her disloyalty and desertion once, he was by the English law (it is the same in the States, I think) debarred from anything more than a separation. In other words, he could not marry again while his wife lived.

Mrs. Lewes was alive and in robust health when her legal husband became interested in George Eliot, as he did, and very deeply, as soon as he had been introduced to her. The two seemed to be mutually attracted, chiefly through the mind, however, for neither of them was young, handsome or particularly graceful. The more they saw of one another the better they liked one another. Their affection was founded on intellectual sympathy and mutual esteem. They wanted to marry; but how could they, except in violation of the law? There are no Connecticut nor Indiana courts in England, where divorce can be and is made easy; and if there were it is doubtful whether the pair would have had recourse to them. They believed they could be of great mutual help spiritually and mentally by living together, and they contemplated it in face of legal technicalities.

A LAW UNTO THEMSELVES.

They consulted their friends, among them some of the best known men and women in Great Britain, and it was decided, after careful consideration, that they should dispense with the usual formalities until they could be legally united. They were fully aware of the gravity of the step they were about to take. But they took it, nevertheless. While their immediate friends countenanced them in their course society necessarily frowned upon it, and they were largely isolated.

About six or seven years ago the first Mrs. Lewes, fortunately, or shall I say superfluously for George Eliot, bestook herself permanently to an English churchyard, and Lewes was at once joined in wedlock to his friend by the laws of the land. The novelist was known as and called Mrs. Lewes immediately after her informal wedding, so that the legal wedding neither changed nor added anything to their domestic relations. Their defiance of average public opinion, however, has aided to cut off the lady from general society and increased the shyness of which she originally had an excess.

She scarcely ever goes out, though she receives a few of her own and her husband's friends. Her opposition to being lionized is, and has always been, very determined. She distinctly declares she does not wish to meet any one who merely admires her literarily; that those who have not some personal regard for her will oblige her by remaining away. This is very queer, since, while hundreds of thousands know and esteem her as a writer, almost nobody knows or esteems her as a woman or can so know or esteem her on account of her persistent seclusion. An introduction is counted as a rare good fortune for any stranger, because she is seldom willing to make new acquaintances, and, indeed, she holds herself so rigorously aloof from social approaches that few persons of pride and sensibility care to make them.

THE WOMAN HERSELF.

Mrs. Lewes is very plain and not at all elegant, having, very naturally under the circumstances, a slender stock of the small talk and minor graces that so largely constitute social agreeableness. Many people think it is in consequence of these defects that she shrinks from the world, which is probably untrue, because she is temperamentally reserved and averse to miscellaneous company.

Her husband has a good deal of the same feeling concerning general society, though he is very far from modest or diffident, as those can attest who have read his "History of Philosophy," "Life of Goethe" or any of his brilliant and scholarly though not always profound works. He is as devoid of beauty as she, albeit an admirable talker, or, rather, monologist, on an infinite variety of subjects.

Opinions differ widely as to George Eliot's personal interest. I have heard her called a charming woman by some, and by others a woman who, one would suppose, had never read half a dozen clever books, much less have written so many great ones. She is mentioned, on one hand, as a most eloquent and wonderful talker; on the other, as a writer who puts all her good things into her manuscripts, leaving nothing for her friends to recognize her genius by.

The truth lies between these extremes. She is different at different times. She may talk remarkably well to-day and very poorly to-morrow. She is a victim of moods, as genius is apt to be, and she obeys her moods unswervingly. Still, at her highest and best, she can make no such use of her tongue as she can of her pen; and her speech must invariably prove more or less a disappointment.

A GREAT WORKER.

She is a tremendous though an irregular worker. She loves to write. She says writing is imperative with her; that she could no more stop writing than she could stop breathing. She is by no means free from ambition either. She enjoys the world's applause, little as she has to do with the world, and she has a clear appreciation—it would be strange if she had not—of her high intellectual gifts. She nearly lives in her study. Day after day she will spend ten and twelve hours a day on her manuscripts, and then will not touch them for forty-eight hours. Her work will average thirty-five or forty hours a week. She writes slow or fast, according to her intellectual temper, but never without frequent revision. She does not permit a line of autograph or proof to leave her until she has made it precisely what she wants. In addition to composition, she studies hard, and is constantly in pursuit of knowledge.

Like her husband she is an excellent linguist, reading French, German, Italian, Spanish and Dutch with the greatest ease and with critical comprehension. Her sole recreation is about two months in the summer, when she usually accompanies her liege to the Continent.

Her constitution is good, but her health is delicate on account of the perpetual strain she puts upon it. There are no signs of her physical or mental failure, and she expects to write quite as many novels as she has already published. Her husband is her agent and financial manager, and has the reputation of bargaining very shrewdly with publishers both for his own and his wife's writings.

She has earned by her pen, it is reported, including her pay for "Deronda," from £36,000 to £40,000 ($180,000 to $200,000).

The literary couple live very comfortably but quietly near Regent's Park, spending part of the year in the country. Their house contains a number of pictures, bronzes and objects of virtu, and they are as harmonious and contented as if neither had ever seen an inkstand.

FINE ARTS.

Mr. John Phillip's centennial picture, "1776 and 1876," will be on exhibition at Snedecor's Gallery, Fifth avenue, near Twenty-third street, until Tuesday next, when it will be sent to the New York State building in the Centennial grounds.

EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS AT LEAVITT'S.

There are now on exhibition at Leavitt's Art Rooms, No. 817 Broadway, the paintings contained in the private collection of William Menzies, and a number from another private collection, to be sold by order of Mr. John D. Townsend, attorney. The greater portion of them were painted by the artists for the collectors. They are generally of cabinet size and, almost without exception, are first class specimens of the artists represented. A large number of them are by our best American artists and many were painted ten or twenty years ago.

One of the most interesting of the cabinet size paintings, is "The Herald in the Country," by the late W. S. Mount. A hunter has thrown aside his gun and game, and is standing by a rail fence reading to an old farmer, who is leaning on a pitchfork, and listening intently to a piece of important news from a copy of the NEW YORK HERALD. The figure of the hunter is a perfect portrait of the artist himself, and the picture itself, aside from the local interest attaching to it, is a good one. A picture by G. H. Boughton, about three by two feet in size, represents a battle field by moonlight, and contains a number of figures, dead and dying, with the watch fires of the living scattered over the field. There are two by Constant Meyer, one of them, "Religious Meditation," being a life size figure of a young woman in deep thought over the illuminate Bible which rests on her lap. The other is a smaller figure of a young girl in a garret, and from the window may be seen the roofs and steeples of the city in the early morning. It has much of the same sentiment which the artist worked into his last work, "The Song of the Shirt," though it bears the date of 1869. Two little pictures by S. J. Guy are full of the poetry of every day life, "Youth and Age" being represented by a little schoolgirl, who, with her school books thrown down, is fastening to the dress of her grandmother a bunch of spring flowers. The old lady holds a large book, and has taken from between its leaves a spray of pressed autumn leaves. The other picture contains a half-clad little child shielding her head from the sun with a large burdock leaf and blowing the seeds of a dandelion. "Dominie Sampson" is one of the best figures ever painted by George H. Hall. "The Tender Passion," by J. G. Brown, is an early example both of the sentiment and the artist. A boy and girl are seated in a swing making sheep's eyes at each other. A picture by the late J. F. Weir gives the interior of his studio. "Early Morning," a vigorous cattle picture, is by Bispham. "The Mountain Glimpse," by J. F. Cropsey; "View on Lake George," by Kensett; "Morning on the Rhine," by George Inness; "Pleasant Valley, Adirondacks," by A. Lamrie; "Normandy Girl," by Henry Peters Gray; "A Summer Day," by James M. Hart, and "Summer Afternoon," by R. W. Hubbard, are pictures painted by these artists some years ago, and may be classed among their best works. "North Conway Meadows," by Sanford R. Gifford; "View from Keanterskill Clove," by J. D. Smillie, and "Whale Cave," by William Hart are works painted by these about twenty years ago, and are entirely different in treatment from their manner of painting at present. A small sketch of zouaves in camp is by Thomas Hicks, in 1861. An interior with figures by Henry Bacon, bears the date of 1867. "Spring," "Summer" and "Autumn" are by Regis Gignoux. A portrait of Washington in pastel by J. Sharpless was one of three done at Mt. Vernon, and presented by him to General McHenry. A portrait in oil of General Lafayette, was painted by S. F. B. Morse, in Washington in 1825. Among the foreign pictures the most conspicuous is "The Youth of Tasso," by Professor Bewer, of Dusseldorf, which was engraved for the Art Union. A small beach, by Escusora, has a special interest attached to it from the fact of the figure being that of Baldini, who is represented at work in the midst of his sketching apparatus. A very fine example of E. Caston is called "Devotion." "Feeding the Ducks," by Leroy, is also very good. "The Politician," by Schinolz; "The Reader," by Alexander Marini; "Oh! How Good," a merry little girl, eating bread and jelly, by E. Labrihon, of Paris; "The Pet Lamb," by L. de Buel; "View in Holland," by W Raelofs; "Lake Geneva," by Girardet, and "Lake Trout," by H. L. Rolfe, one of the finest fish painters in the world, are all very fine works by these artists. There are also good examples of Paul Soyer, Williamson, Edward Moran, J. Autrey, Pecrus, Zuber, Buhler and others, including water colors and etchings by F. de Brackelear, H. P. Smith, F. S. Cozzens, Le Bas, &c.; a marble bush and a head in alto relievo by Launt Thompson. They will be on exhibition until the evenings of Tuesday and Wednesday, April 18 and 19.

CUT HIS THROAT.

About six o'clock last evening Thomas McCauley, thirty-five years of age, a junk dealer, of No. 36 North Portland avenue, Brooklyn, cut his throat with a razor. He had been despondent for some time past. A sign in front of his house had been removed by the authorities and he was afraid some trouble would arise concerning his license. Last evening when he went home his wife asked him to lie down as he looked tired. He complied with her request, and while she was down stairs on an errand he took his life in the manner above described.

CUTTING OFF A CHILD'S TONGUE.

A very peculiar accident occurred in Meadow street, Hoboken, on Thursday night. Three children were playing together in a room. One of them, named Mary Hallan, stuck her tongue through the crevice of the door. Suddenly one of her playmates shut the door, cutting off a portion of her tongue.

SUICIDE OF A BARBER.

Rudolph Demond, a barber, of No. 598 Grand street, committed suicide yesterday morning by shooting himself in the left side. He had been sick for some time with disease of the heart and lungs and became despondent in consequence. He leaves an only sister. Coroner Eickhoff held an inquest yesterday, and the jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts.

NEW BEDFORD'S NARCISSUS.

THAT IMMORAL IMAGE STILL RUFFLING THE PUBLIC SURFACE IN VAIN—EFFORTS OF THE OWNER TO GET POSSESSION OF HIS STATUETTE.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., April 13, 1876.

That "terrible outrage" upon the public morals of New Bedford, which was enacted here some three years ago by the public exhibition in a store window of the nude statuette of Narcissus, continues to be a fruitful theme of ridiculous comment throughout the community. Periodically and continuously ever since the seizure of the harmless but offending work of art by the chaste and righteous City Marshal, the matter has been before the courts, Legislature and public, and even now the momentous question of whether the statuette shall be restored to its owner or not, is being considered by the grave and dignified justices of the Superior Court of Bristol county.

THE OFFENDER AND HIS OFFENCE.

The individual who so seriously shocked the morals of the Sperm City is Charles Hazletine, a dealer in music and works of art, an honorary local Secretary and an agent of the Art Union, of London, and informally agent of another London Art Association. In October, 1873, Mr. Hazletine placed a small statuette of the Pompeiian Narcissus in his show window in connection with some other works of art, and the special statuette mentioned was seized by the City Marshal on the ground that it was an immoral exhibition. The case has had four separate trials, the ultimatum being that Mr. Hazletine was acquitted, but in his acquittal there was nothing said about what should be done with the offending work of art, and it has ever since been held in the possession of the authorities. Both at the last and present session of the Legislature Mr. Hazletine petitioned that the image might be restored to him, and the chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the present body instructed him to apply for the same to the Court which is now in session in Taunton, and the decision is daily expected.

A SERIES OF BLUNDERS.

Mr. Hazletine, in his petition to the Court, indulges in the following observations:—In further explanation, I respectfully submit that the affair throughout was a series of blunders. First, your petitioner mistook so much of this community as to place the image in his window; the Marshal mistook in seizing it, especially without a warrant; the Judge of the Police Court misapprehended the whole matter; the District Attorney erred if he advised the Grand Jury to find a bill; Judge Bacon gravely erred in charging that "a man intends what he does"; on the third trial the jury to the extent of nine out of twelve mistook in voting your petitioner "guilty"; and, finally, I call the attention of your honors to the seeming absurdity of the authorities for holding from me my property for nearly three years.

THE FABLE OF NARCISSUS.

A proper estimate of the design of the author of this little work of art can only be formed by those who are familiar with the fable which it illustrates; and as the person or persons instigating this prosecution must be presumed to be ignorant of it, the following account, abridged from Ovid's Metamorphoses, may be of service:—

> Narcissus, a beautiful boy of sixteen years, says the poet, was sought after by many of the loveliest nymphs, among them by Echo. They all not only fail to captivate him, but do not succeed in making the slightest impression by their charms. At length, one of the rejected nymphs addresses to Nemesis, the goddess of retribution, a prayer that Narcissus, when he shall fall in love, may be in like manner denied the object of his affection. The goddess gives her assent to this prayer, and when at length the youth fatigued with the labor of hunting and overcome by the burning heat of the sun, seeks repose by the brink of a shaded fountain, he beholds his own beautiful form reflected, as in a mirror, from the surface of the water. He strives to embrace it, and failing, becomes conscious at last that it is his own image, and that his efforts will be fruitless. As this consciousness does not diminish his passion, he gradually pines away, consumed by the ardor and the fruitlessness of his own longing. His Naiad sisters, mourning their absent brother, seek his body, and find only a yellow flower encompassed by white leaves.

This is the fable in prose, divested of all the poetic imagery in which Ovid has clothed it. Those who find in the ancient mythologies a moral purpose, affirm that this fable is intended as a moral lesson, disclosing the fatal effects of self love, and add that "the pursuit by Narcissus of his own image, ever retreating from his embrace, strongly resembles the little reality that exists in many of those pleasures which mankind so eagerly pursue."

If this be the meaning of the fable, what is to be said of the work of art in which it is embodied? The aim of art is to bring the mind, through the medium of appropriate material forms, into communion with that which these forms symbolize. By the thought symbolized, therefore, and by the truthfulness of its embodiment, a work of art must be judged. If this view be correct, a statuette like that in question serves to strengthen the sense of poetic beauty; and only the uncultured or the wilfully vicious can see in it anything to stimulate immoral tendencies.

THE PROPOSED ELEVEN THOUSAND DOLLARS FUND.

EXAMINATION OF POLICEMEN BEFORE THE COMMISSIONERS—ASTUTE OFFICERS SCHEMING IN THE CITY HALL PARK.

The testimony given by the policemen who were parties to the recent movement to raise $11,000 among the members of the force for the purpose of defeating the Police bill now pending before the Legislature is of a highly amusing character. The ideas entertained by the leaders of the movement with respect to the press and the general stupidity they displayed in the management of the affair are a sad commentary on the intelligence of "the best police force in the world." Commissioner Erhardt, who conducted the examination, refused to give the names of the witnesses, although he permitted a portion of the testimony to be made public. The testimony of one officer, given below, is not a little amusing and may be taken as a sample of the lot:—

Said he:—"I come, Mr. Commissioner, as a square man. There was a meeting, originating through lobbying between station houses, before any notices were written. The first caucus was in reference to how the precincts could be got together. This was held on a seat in City Hall Park. Passing along there we met. A great many propositions were made. It was a party on the square. I am under a certain affidavit not to divulge the names of those present. One suggested that we act through the press; another said that if this was done the Commissioners would get it all in the morning, and they would issue an order to stop it forthwith. I said the way to do it was to get the notices written out, and that each should take a number of precincts and notify them in that way. Another proposed to notify the treasurers of the Mutual Aid. I came to this meeting in this way:—An officer was standing at the corner on our day off, and nine of us sat down in the park to consult about the matter of grading the force and reducing our salaries. It was said that some of us had large families, and our pay must not be cut down now, and that when so many new men were going into the force it would only take twelve months to clear out the twelve hundred dollar men. The new men coming into the force are so numerous, and the old are decreasing so fast that in about a year we would be reduced to eight hundred dollar men, and that we could not support families on that pay. It would be awful to present such a bill to the Legislature. We discussed the matter for about three hours, and a committee was appointed to see that the notices were sent. I do not want to give their names; they all travel as I do myself. We gave our words to each other in proper form in the way people do who understand each other. Rather than divulge this I would thank you to throw me out of that window and smash my head. There were nine of us, and I admit that one of them was a representative of the ——— newspaper, and we all pledged ourselves. I was secretary of the meeting held subsequently. Some one proposed that we send a smart fellow to Albany; the person named was a stranger to me; then Mr. ——— was named, and then a lawyer in Wall street was named, and he was finally agreed on. I was asked to go on the Committee of Arrangements, but declined, as I did not know the man. I heard mention of $5, $10 and $1 a man being raised, but as an upright and square man I heard no sum stated. I would rather not answer any questions about any of the other men's business."

With respect to the last three meetings most of the witnesses attempted to make the Commissioners believe that they did not fairly understand the object in view when they attended, but supposed it was to raise money for the Mutual Aid fund in some way. One witness, however, admitted that with a full knowledge of the object in view he would have received contributions as treasurer. Said he, "I don't want to stand behind the door."

THE WESTCHESTER OUTRAGE.

ARREST OF A NEGRO ON SUSPICION—HIS IDENTIFICATION BY THE UNFORTUNATE VICTIM.

A colored tramp, calling himself David Astens and giving his age as twenty-one, applied for lodgings at the Yonkers police station on Thursday night. As he answered the description given of the negro who outraged Nettie Many, the young white girl, near Hall's Corners, on the 6th inst., Captain Mangin took him to Tarrytown yesterday morning, and after a consultation with Constable Alfred Lawrence, of that village, they conveyed the prisoner to the scene of the crime, some four or five miles distant. On being confronted by the young woman for identification, she riveted her gaze upon him for a few moments, apparently in doubt, until Constable Lawrence unbuttoned the negro's coat collar, when Nettie, bursting into tears, exclaimed, "Oh, you are the man, you are the man; how could you do such a thing to a poor, innocent girl like me." The scene was a most pathetic one, but the accused never winced, remarking earnestly, "Madam, you are mistaken; I am not the man." By this time a crowd of some fifty men had assembled around the store kept by the stepfather of the young woman, and threats of speedy vengeance on the negro were loudly uttered. It was at this juncture deemed advisable to bring the prisoner into the presence of Delia McNamara, an intelligent child of about nine years old, who saw a colored man twice in the vicinity of the scene of the outrage on the afternoon on which it was perpetrated, and under circumstances which connected him unmistakably with the crime. The officers accordingly drove their prisoner to the public school where the little girl was, and she, on seeing the man, at once asserted that he was much lighter colored than the person she saw on the occasion indicated, and that he was not the man that twice asked her for a drink of water. On hearing this, to him, life-saving answer the accused shed tears of relief, as the exasperated citizens had determined to lynch him if the little girl's identification of him had corroborated that of the victim of the assault. Constable Lawrence finally returned to Tarrytown with his prisoner, who was placed in the lockup, and will this morning be taken to the County Jail to await further examination. The negro denies that he was ever in the vicinity of Tarrytown before, and says that on the 6th inst. he was at Elizabeth, N. J., where a white woman living not far from the depot at that place gave him a shirt. This garment has been secured, and will probably be the means of proving the guilt or innocence of the prisoner.

TAMMANY PRIMARIES.

Delegates from the different election districts in the Eighth Assembly district met in convention last evening at Nos. 77 and 79 Essex street and elected the following delegates and alternates to represent Tammany Hall at the State Convention in Utica:—

Delegates—Edward D. Gale, Thomas Carleton, George Hall. Alternates—William Campbell, George S. Stauf and Jacob Morton.

These delegates are not pledged to the support of any particular Presidential candidate.

ANTI-TAMMANY PRIMARY.

The Anti-Tammany Convention of the Twentieth Assembly district was held last evening. The following delegates and alternates to the Utica Convention were elected without opposition:—Delegates—Judge John B. Barbour, Emmanuel B. Hart, Francis M. Bixby. Alternates—Dr. Feodor Mierson, Stephen H. Turnbull, John Russell.

LIBERAL CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the Liberal Club last night the following officers were elected:—President, James Parton; Vice Presidents, W. L. Ormsby, Jr., S. S. Nash and J. H. Johnston; Recording Secretary, D. T. Gardner; Corresponding Secretary, P. H. Vander Weyde; Librarian, Henry Evans; Treasurer, James M. McKinlay; Trustees, Q. B. Wakeman, Courtlandt Palmer and Edward Moran.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY.

The delegates to the Independent Labor Party met last night at Masonic Hall.

A letter was read from Mr. Egbert Hasard, of Washington, D. C., stating that General Banks was doing his utmost to secure the passage of the bill now before the Senate extending the benefits of the homestead laws. The bill advocates the advancing by the government of $400 each to persons out of employment in the large cities to enable them to go out and settle on the lands now unoccupied in the Western States, the loan to be paid back with interest and the land and improvements to be held as security therefor. The object of the bill is to relieve the cities of the mass of unemployed persons now encumbering them. A vote of thanks was passed to Senator Morrissey for introducing a bill making the office of Comptroller of the city of New York elective. A resolution was passed protesting against the passage of the bill by the Legislature limiting the annual outlay for public works in this city to $1,000,000.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The National Woman Suffrage Association will hold its ninth annual Convention in Masonic Hall, in this city, on the 10th and 11th of next month. The circular announcing the convention declares that the men alone of this country live in a republic, that women enter the second hundred years of national life as political slaves, and that only through equal and impartial suffrage for all citizens, without distinction of sex, can a true republican government be established. The call is signed by Matilda Joslyn Gage, Susan B. Anthony and L. Devereux Blake.

GRANT'S FRIEND CONKLING.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

General Grant's reputation for political diplomacy is not such as to be assuring of his neutrality in a scramble for the succession. It is a habit of his to stick to his friends, and of all of them none has been so unwavering in his attachment or so ardent in defence of the administration and its measures as Senator Conkling. We are disposed to credit the report of the NEW YORK HERALD that the President told Congressman Jere. Haralson that Conkling was his man, especially as there has been no authoritative contradiction of the statement. But what can an administration do for Conkling that has not sufficient strength to avert its own disasters?

CAMERON, CONKLING AND PENNSYLVANIA.

[From the Philadelphia Star.]

By the way, we are a little puzzled to understand what the result of the Republican Convention at Harrisburg means. The Convention, of course, indorsed Hartranft as a fit candidate for President. Of course he is. Is there a free born American citizen who does not think to himself that he is as good as any other free born American citizen, and therefore a fit candidate for the Presidency? And this is about all there is of Hartranft's candidacy. He is as good as the average Pennsylvania politician. But then he stands no more show for the nomination at Cincinnati than he does of succeeding the present Czar of Russia. Nor will he have any control in shaping the policy of the delegates selected to represent Pennsylvania in the Cincinnati Convention. Here is where Blaine made a big mistake in showing Hartranft so much attention when on a visit to this city recently. He argued to himself that if Hartranft could receive an indorsement from his State Convention he must necessarily have full control of the delegates and vote them at his pleasure. Now, Conkling showed more shrewdness when he gave his attention to Mr. Don Cameron. This eminent son of Pennsylvania was here for a week about two months ago, and very attentive to him was Senator Conkling. I remember one day the two sat side by side on one of the lounges in the Senate chamber in deep conversation for fully three hours, which is a long time for New York's favorite son to give to any human being. We think the Pennsylvania delegation mean Conkling or else a totally new man.

DON CAM.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

It will be news to the majority of the republicans that they came near having Don Cameron for a vice-presidential candidate, four years ago. It is a historical fact, nevertheless. Simon's agents had fixed things satisfactorily with a number of delegations, including that from New York. The only thing that remained to be done was to induce the Pennsylvania delagates to present son Don's name as the unanimous choice of the Keystone republicans for the second place on the ticket. It was the proverbial slip between the cup and the lip. A few influential Pennsylvanians (not delegates) interfered and spoiled everything. Instigated and encouraged by them, two or three members of the delegation stood out, the opportunity passed, and Henry Wilson was nominated. This year, Mr. Cameron senior is more modest. His price is a Cabinet portfolio for Don. If Adams or Bristow is nominated at Cincinnati, Don will be left out in the cold. If Morton or Conkling, he won't. If Blaine, it depends.

SOUTHERN CAPITAL.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

The repeated cry of poverty from the South is rather anomalous in view of a constant succession of good crops. The cotton, now being marketed, has already reached 3,813,000 bales, and will probably run up a total of 4,500,000 before September 1. The exports of raw cottons to foreign countries has risen from 2,153,000 bales in 1875 to 2,643,000 in 1876, the demand showing an unexpected elasticity. Of course, prices have been low, but the return on the whole ought to profit the South. The Charleston News, however, complains that there is less money (capital?) in South Carolina now than there was ten years ago, and warns the agents of Northern fertilizers that "the planters are very poor" and cannot invest. It notes a tendency to rely on the small grains and make cotton an incidental crop. There is wisdom in a diversification of industry, but cotton must always be the chief reliance of the cotton States for profitable agriculture. Thrift is the great need, whatever the crop.

JOHN DOLAN'S FATE.

William F. Howe, counsel for John Dolan, the condemned murderer, expresses a hope that Governor Tilden will commute the sentence of his client. The petition in his behalf, which has been in course of preparation for the past week or more, is not yet quite ready, but Mr. Howe expects to be able to send it to Albany by Monday at the farthest. Governor Tilden is expected to arrive in this city to-morrow evening, and it is the intention of Dolan's counsel to call upon him at his residence and use every endeavor to induce His Excellency to commute the sentence to imprisonment for life. The petition is signed by a large number of well known residents of this city. It is said to be the intention of several aldermen to call upon the Governor and plead for mercy. The unfortunate man himself says that he has no hope of a commutation. He was visited yesterday morning by Father Duranquet, S. J., and his wife. Rev. Father Barry, of the Church of the Transfiguration, who has also been attending him for some weeks past, is reported to be seriously ill. The prisoner was also visited by one of the Sisters from the Convent of Our Lady of Lourdes, France.

THE STATE CAPITAL

The Quarantine Question in Statu Quo.

RELIEF FOR THE EMIGRATION COMMISSION

Governor Tilden's Commission on City Government Wants Time to Digest the Subject.

OLD PROB. AS A LEGAL WITNESS.

ALBANY, April 14, 1876.

The settlement of the Quarantine question is still a matter of uncertainty. A majority of the Committee on Commerce and Navigation appear determined not to report the bill placing the affairs of Quarantine in the hands of the Commissioners, with authority to collect the fees, pay the Health Officer a salary of $10,000 a year and discharge all the current obligations of the establishment without any expense to the State. The defeat of Mr. Campbell's motion last evening to discharge the committee from the further consideration of the bill is taken to mean that a formidable opposition to the measure has been organized in the Assembly in the interest of Dr. Vanderpoel. The committee consists of Messrs. Worth, Campbell, Lawson, Power, Townsend, Watts, Patten, Carty and Maher. Three of this number (Worth, Campbell and Power) are in favor of reporting the bill. Two weeks ago there was a majority for it, but at the present time, it appears, several members of the committee have changed their views.

If the Health Officer succeeds in defeating the bill things will remain as before, with the exception that the State will be saved the expense of making any appropriation for this year at least, which will be a clear loss to Dr. Vanderpoel of $50,000; but as his net income, apart from that, is said to overlap the figure of $80,000 a year, his prospects cannot be said to look bad.

GOVERNMENT OF CITIES.

The following communication was read in the Assembly to-day, laid on the table and ordered printed:—

TO THE SENATE AND ASSEMBLY:—

The commission appointed under the concurrent resolution of the Senate and Assembly, passed on the 22d of May, 1875, to devise a plan for the government of cities, respectfully report that upon receiving notice of their appointment they assembled pursuant to a call by one of their number on the 15th day of December last, and proceeded to the discharge of the duty devolved upon them.

From that time to the present they have held regular and protracted sessions each week, at all of which nearly every member of the commission has attended. The subject intrusted to them has been assigned to the several members for separate investigation, and much of the time of the members in the interval between the sessions has been occupied in the examination of the various questions presented and in the drawing of reports to the commission embracing the results of such investigations.

The Commissioners feel warranted in saying that they have diligently and faithfully given themselves to the performance of their duties, but they have found the task to increase in magnitude and difficulty as they advanced, and now, after occupying themselves with it for a period of three months and upward, they perceive it to be quite impossible to bring their work to a conclusion within the time limited by the concurrent resolution, and they are of the opinion that a much longer time is requisite to digest the information they have collected and mature a consistent plan fit to be submitted to the wisdom of the Legislature.

Deeply impressed with a sense of the importance of the duty assigned to them, and diffident of their ability to adequately perform it, they are yet willing to devote much more of their time and their best efforts to the task, and are not without the hope that they may, should their labors be continued, be able to make a useful contribution to the cause of good municipal government.

The commission conceives that there is less occasion for regret at their inability to make a final report to the present Legislature, for the reason that, having reached the conclusion that it is essential to the usefulness of any scheme which may be desired that it should, in part, be entrenched in constitutional forms, and as no proposed amendments to the constitution could, under the provisions of article 13, section 1, thereof receive a second Legislative sanction until after the next general election of Senators, a report at the present session would not greatly expedite the adoption of any plan which might be proposed.

They therefore respectfully submit to the Legislature whether it is expedient to extend the time of making their report to the next session. WM. M. EVARTS, President.

NEW YORK, April 7, 1876.

THE EMIGRATION COMMISSION.

The Joint Committee on Emigration, appointed on motion of Mr. Muller, of New York, ten days ago, to devise some means for the relief of the Emigration Commission, reported to-day by a bill which authorizes the State Comptroller to draw his warrant upon the State Treasurer for the sums of money which the Commissioners may, from time to time, deem necessary to carry on their business and for the protection of the emigrants. The exercise of this authority to draw money for this purpose is limited to one year from the 1st of next May, and the amount to be fixed in the bill by the two houses (the committee not mentioning any definite sum) is to be taken from any funds in the hands of the treasurer not otherwise appropriated. The amount that will be required by the Commissioners for the year will be, it is said, about $160,000.

HE WOULD NOT WAIT.

A page boy and one of the messengers got into a little spat in the lobby to-day, during which the page made a dart into the Assembly. He was closely pursued by the messenger, who rushed into the Chamber on a dead run. The Speaker ordered him to come back, but he could not see it in that light and walked leisurely back to the door and disappeared. The Sergeant-at-Arms was ordered to arrest him, but Goss, luckily for the lad, imagined that his prey had flown in one direction and acted accordingly, while the fact was that the sly youth had made a bee line through the State Library. While the pursuer and the pursued were looking for one another the business of the House was brought to a standstill, and the Speaker, leaning on his gavel and awaiting the appearance of the culprit at the bar, stood looking as savage as a meat axe. Several minutes having elapsed and neither the Sergeant-at-Arms nor the runaway putting in an appearance the Assembly went on with its work as usual.

THE COMMISSIONER OF JURORS.

When the bill in relation to the Commissioner of Jurors in New York came up for a third reading in the Senate Mr. Gerard moved to refer, with orders to strike out the section providing that the term of office of the present Commissioner of Jurors shall terminate twenty days after the passage of the act. A debate, in which Senators Gerard, Starbuck, Rogers and Bradley participated, followed, Starbuck taking strong grounds against the principle of legislating men out of office. Finding a more adverse sentiment to the main feature of the bill than he anticipated, Mr. Bixby withdrew his bill for the present the understanding being that as the settlement of the question of Taylor vs. Dunlap is pending in the Court of Appeals it would be wiser to await the decision before taking final action on the bill.

"OLD PROB'S" RELIABILITY.

The bill providing that any record of the observations in regard to the condition of the weather taken by the Signal Service of the United States may be read in evidence in any court of this State, when certified under oath by the officers in charge, has passed the Assembly.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The Senate concurred in the Assembly amendment striking out the clause relative to the Court of Arbitration in the Appropriation bill.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE LEGISLATURE.

It is generally understood now that the final adjournment of the Legislature will take place on the 29th inst., two weeks from to-morrow.

GENERAL PRADO.

After attending the complimentary entertainment at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Thursday night General Prado and party departed for Philadelphia on the midnight train, accompanied by Mr. Charles R. Flint, who has charge of the reception arrangements. On their arrival they were received by Mr. Thomas Clarke and Mr. Edward H. Williams, and escorted to the Centennial grounds and were enabled to inspect the various Exposition buildings and obtain statistics of the cost of the work to the present time. The party next drove through Fairmount Park, the General expressing much interest in the Girard avenue bridge, from which he was enabled to gain an idea of the American system of bridge construction. The party on returning to the city were shown the principal buildings, among them the Masonic Temple, the new City Hall, in process of construction, and the Baldwin locomotive works, the largest in the world. The General and party were then entertained by the Social Art Club, and breakfasted in company with the Chief Engineer of the Centennial Exhibition, Mr. Henry Pettit. Departing on the eleven o'clock A. M. train the party arrived at the Jersey City depot at two o'clock, where they were met by a number of prominent citizens, among whom were General Mariano y Prado, Colonel Enrique Lara, Senator Carlos Peridel, Captains Ulises Dilboy, V. Merino, José Ugartechi, Leonico Prado, ex-Admiral J. R. Tucker, Hon. Thomas Murphy and his son Richard G. Murphy, Peruvian Minister Richard Gibbs, General Sharpe, Messrs. Hotchkiss, J. J. Barril, J. M. Munoz, W. R. Grace, C. R. Flint, Amos Cotting, J. A. Jameson, Jr., and Captain A. A. Fengar, of United States cutter Grant.

They were escorted to the Cunard dock, whence they were conveyed to the United States cutter Grant and introduced to Collector Arthur, who accompanied them during the subsequent visit to the government works at Hell Gate and to the schoolship Minnesota. The President sails on Saturday on the Germanic for Liverpool, en route for London, where some important Peruvian interests demand his attention. He expects to return to the Centennial Exhibition, however, and then depart for Peru, where he assumes office on the 2d of August next.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

Remarkable Report of the "Chief Constructor" of the United States Navy.

DENSE IGNORANCE OR WHAT?

Why the Ships of Our Navy Are Behind the Age.

Comparative Cost of the American, British and French Navies.

SMOOTH BORE VS. RIFLE GUNS.

Pertinent Facts for the Consideration of the Government.

Some months since a Board of Naval Constructors made an extended examination of all the navy yards on the Atlantic seaboard and submitted a report of the result of their labor to the "Chief Constructor," who laid it before the Navy Department; but, for some reason not stated, it has not been deemed advisable to publish this document. It has leaked out, however, through the ubiquitous—or, as the bureau would style it, "iniquitous"—reporter of "the libellous daily press," that the principal point in the report of the nine constructors composing the Board was a recommendation to the effect that the present navy yard management, on the whole, being bad, it would be better, in order to have more efficient administration, to transfer the actual control of the navy yards to the naval constructors, with, of course, a nominal commandant as "figurehead" to bear the responsibility, so that better results (in a political point of view, doubtless) may be secured.

Though we cannot give our readers the contents of this doubtless admirable report of the nine wise men of the navy, we can furnish them with an abstract of that of their chief, just published in the "annual report of the Secretary of the Navy with accompanying documents for the year 1875." and to be found on pp. 179 to 201 inclusive.

The exact value of a "Chief Constructor's" report, which the government printing press issues and the American people pay for, may, therefore, be of some interest to the readers of a newspaper like the HERALD, whose clientage includes, one may say, almost our entire seafaring population, and whose circulation, as most sailors are aware, is not limited to any one land under the sun.

To this end it has been deemed advisable to give our readers a carefully prepared digest of the principal points in the recent official report of Mr. Isaiah Hanscom, "Chief Constructor" of the United States Navy, together with some comments thereupon, which may serve to show what an exceedingly valuable document it is to emanate from the head of a bureau charged with the annual expenditure of about $4,000,000; further, how wise and wholly excellent the system of administration must be which employs so intelligent, capable and truthful an officer at the head of the most important of the eight bureaus of the Navy Department.

The report opens by stating that the estimates submitted exceed those for the previous year by $600,000, and that "it will require all the amount recommended to keep those vessels that are worthy of being retained in the navy in proper condition for sea service." This, if not very definite, is, at all events, interesting, not only to our political economists and statesmen, but to all other citizens who, entertaining an affection for their country and wishing well to that arm of the national service that defends its flag afloat, would like to know exactly how many vessels there are in the United States navy "worthy of being retained," but sooth to say, on this important point, the worthy "Chief Constructor" does not enlighten us, and we are left to dim conjecture as to the exact number (of ships) which is to act as a divisor to the three and one-half millions "estimated for." Mr. Hanscom next observes, "It is well known that wooden vessels will rapidly deteriorate, and much more rapidly since steam has become the principal motive power," &c. After thus stating this indisputable fact, our readers will naturally expect to hear of some recommendations from the "Chief Constructor" of the United States Navy in reference to a remedy for this unfortunate condition of things. Here it is:—

Having virtually stated that wooden ships do rot, will rot and cannot be kept (even by carbolic acid) from rotting, the "Chief Constructor" goes on (in the latter part of his report) to remark, "The government, to be prepared for any emergency which may arise, must have on hand enough of well seasoned timber to build seventy-five vessels at least, with despatch, all of which could be built in six months if the materials were ready."

That is, as "wooden vessels deteriorate rapidly" it will be of course extremely desirable to have on hand at all times, in addition to the 200,000 cubic feet of live oak timber already partly exposed and rotting at the several navy yards, an ample further supply of rotten or rotting wooden shipping for emergencies such as that referred to by this worthy "Chief Constructor" in his letter of October 23, 1874, to Commodore Nichols, of the Boston Navy Yard, where this bureau chief nominally requests but virtually orders the protesting Commodore to employ before election day a sufficiently large number of voting mechanics and laborers to insure the election of Messrs. Gooch and Frost, whom "the administration is desirous" of seeing returned to Congress!

The idea of iron framed ships, composite ships, or, in fact, modern ships of any kind suited to the demands of modern warfare, seems never to have occurred to the mind of this excellent "Chief Constructor," who, however, next alludes to the increased cost of building and repairing wooden vessels in the United States; but prudently, perhaps, ignores the causes which lead to the necessity of these frequent "repairs" as well as the reasons for the especially high cost in this country of vessels of war built in government as well as private dockyards. He states the average wages paid in 1854 and 1874 to American mechanics, which is doubtless correct, but does not give any comparative table of the cost of American and foreign ships of war, so that we are left in the dark as to how we stand as regards relative expense and relative results and efficiency as compared with foreign governments. Let us supply this omission for our worthy "Chief Constructor," at least, to a limited extent, assuming the cost of ships of war per ton on the basis of load line displacements of the vessels, which is for our purpose of comparison as good a rule as any other.

Comparative cost of American, English and French vessels of war, which the "Chief Constructor" of the United States Navy does not give in his official report:—

NOTE.—S stands for smooth-bore and R for rifle cannon.

It will be seen by the above table that, while it costs the United States from $223? to $710? per ton weight to produce unarmored wooden or lightly built unarmored iron vessels (Ranger class) of comparatively insignificant power and speed, England and France, to say nothing of Germany, are producing not only fast iron-clads armed with twelve-inch rifle cannon at from $157 to $223 per ton weight, but also exceedingly swift unarmored iron cruisers, most of them carrying the powerful nine-inch rifle cannon, which is capable of piercing any of the American iron-clads in service at one and a half miles range. While we have but one coast defence iron-clad fit for service—to wit, the Dictator, of two fifteen-inch smooth-bore cannon, laminated armor and barely eight knots speed—and but twelve harbor defence monitors (Montauk class) of five knots speed and thin laminated armor easily pierced by the seven-inch rifle at 1,200 yards, the "Chief Constructor" of the United States Navy has the simplicity or assurance to assert in his official report to the Secretary of the Navy (see p. 180) he says:—"It will be seen that at no time has the navy been in such good and strong condition for harbor and coast defence as at the present time." And he continues in either gross ignorance or apparent contempt of the opinion of scientific and practical men and the inexorable logic of fact, developed on the proving grounds of England, France and Germany, to assert, "The power of our iron-clads for harbor and coast defence, where the fighting will be done in smooth water, must be considered equal, if not superior, to that of a large number of sea-going iron-clads of foreign nations." After reading such drivelling trash from the pen of a "Chief Constructor," is it any wonder the navy is going to seed? In fact, it seems marvellous that we are able to keep up any sort of a navy at all on any amount of money that the liberality of Congress may in charity bestow on it. Is it possible this "Chief Constructor" has never heard of such ships as the Redoubtable (French), Preussen (German), the Sultan, Alexandra, Dreadnought, Devastation, Teméraire and the Inflexible (British), the latter cased with 24 inches of iron and to be armed with four 81 ton guns, which can throw shot weighing 1,450 lbs. through 20 inches of iron at a mile range? Has he never heard of the new German vessel which is to carry Herr Krupp's new steel gun, a breech-loader which weighs 126 tons and which can pierce two feet of solid iron at the distance of a mile?

But the cream of the "Chief Constructor's" official report is to come. After giving on page 184 a comparison of the English and American iron-clads, in which the Warrior (of 9,000 D.) is set down as 1,250 tons, on page 185 is inserted a table entitled, "Relative comparison of the number of guns and tonnage of the English and the United States naval vessels."

This comparison applies wholly to the unarmored cruisers of the two Powers, and the idea is sought to be conveyed by the table that the American navy is on a very respectable footing, indeed, as compared with that of Great Britain.

In looking over this remarkable production of the head of the construction department of the navy one is lost in absolute amazement at the vision of luxuriant ignorance, if not absolute idiocy, which the insertion of such a table must presuppose on the part of professional readers of our "Chief Constructor's" reports.

Such vessels as the Shah, Raleigh or Inconstant are, of course, entirely left out of our "Chief Constructor's" table, though these vessels are all 15 knot or 16 knot ships of from 4,789 to 5,782 tons displacement, and carry the powerful 9 inch rifle gun, whose power is greater than that of our 15 inch smooth bore. The beautiful frigates of the Immortalite class of 28 guns, 3,984 tons and 12 knots sea speed, are all left out. Narcissus class, 11 knots speed, likewise. Ditto the Galatea class of 26 guns, 4,583 tons and 11 knots sea speed. Ditto the new 15½ knot iron corvettes Boadicea, Bacchante, Euryalus, Rover, Diamond, Magicienne and Sapphire; the 14 knot composite ships Tourmaline, Turquoise and Ruby and others building or built; the new sloop Osprey class, built with all the latest improvements in armament, spar bows and steam machinery. Even the best ships of the old Barrosa and Cadmus classes (2,187 tons D, 10 knot vessels and 17 guns) are left out.

See page 185, Report of the Secretary of the Navy for 1875.

"Relative comparison of the number of guns and tonnage of the English and the United States Naval vessels," according to Mr. Isaiah Hanscom, Chief Constructor of the United States Navy, together with some information Mr. Hanscom was very careful to omit in his "relative comparison."

We take the liberty, as our readers will observe, of adding some additional columns to the above table of Mr. Hanscom—data that he evidently overlooked by reason of his arduous labors elsewhere. Thus corrected, some of the comparisons given by a "Chief Constructor" become ludicrous enough. For instance, in the American column the tonnage, new measurement, is set down, while in the English list the tonnage displacement at the load water line is given. The effect of this, as a cheat, need not be explained to any intelligent seafaring person, but to those of our readers who may not be familiar with these technical terms and differences in tonnage it may be said that the object of the "Chief Constructor" is to make out the American ships lighter than they really are by many hundreds of tons in some cases, while the English ships are made out larger than they really are, to a similar extent. In other words, it is a shrewd piece of professional trickery, if done purposely; if not done purposely, it argues a density of ignorance worthy of an "intelligent contraband." In any event, the table uncorrected is calculated to deceive all but experts.

The comparison between the Lackawanna (American) and the little sloop Fawn (English) illustrates the cheat forcibly. The Lackawanna is actually classed by Mr. Hanscom with the Fawn, whereas in reality the former is a large corvette of ten heavy smooth bores and 2,220 tons displacement, while the Fawn is a small five gun sloop of 751 tons new measurement and 1,045 tons displacement—in short, just half the Lackawanna's size! Wouldn't this be a glorious nut for some future "James' Naval History?" Running one's eye over this table and noting our remarks thereon in the additional columns, it will be observed that while the column for our own ships contains sixty out of the seventy unarmored steamers actually in the Navy Register of 1876, all the old hulks rotten on the stocks and ex-blockade runners being pressed into service to swell the American list—the column for English ships contains but few new vessels beyond the Active, Wild Swan, Arab and some new gun vessels, a few being really inserted, however, to make the description more complete to the confiding taxpayer or member of Congress. In short, the list of English vessels is almost entirely made up of old sailing craft used as drill ships for boys, rotten "block ships," "guard ho's," tenders to training ships, old paddle wheel steamers utterly behind the age, &c., &c. The only wonder is that "Chief Constructor" Hanscom did not add to the list the old line of battle ship Victory, on board of which Nelson was killed at Trafalgar, for she is still in service. It is certainly a grave oversight his leaving out Noah's ark, as the British people are of the Aryan race, and may take umbrage at such slights. For with a list of 773 vessels (the present number in the British navy list for service, not including over 100 more old hulks in all sorts of service in home and foreign ports) to choose from, such omissions as those of the Victory and Noah's ark are unpardonable, and the matter is even serious enough to call for investigation by a committee of retired clam boatmen charged with power to send for persons and papers.

Seriously speaking, do the American people desire to continue to pay such fancy prices as they annually do for a system of naval management which admits of such disgraceful displays of either sheer ignorance or wilful deception, in order to deceive Congress as to the real condition of our navy on the part of an official controlling the most important staff bureau in the Navy Department?

We advise the President to get rid of this intelligent "Chief Constructor" as speedily as possible, for he will prove a luxury too expensive to keep, and to assist the wisest of our legislators (irrespective of party claims) in such a way as to bring about such genuine and substantial reform in naval management as may enable us to secure for the future at least as good results in our ships of war as are obtained by Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans, Turks and Italians, Jews, Gentiles and other people of common sense the wide world over.

President Grant and Secretary of War Taft have just inaugurated a most wise and wholesome reform in recalling the General of the Army to his legitimate duties in connection with that army. Will the President perform the same kind, generous and judicious office for the sister service; or, if he thinks it preferable, will he not appoint a commission, consisting of Admiral Porter, Vice Admiral Rowan and Rear Admiral John Rodgers, to manage the professional details of our unfortunate navy? If he does, the whole service will rise up and applaud him. Then, perhaps, the construction department of the navy may secure for its head a genius like Ericsson, with the practical wisdom of an Eckford, and the naval service be once more restored to its proper position in the eyes of the world.

MOODY AND SANKEY.

There were three sermons delivered at the Hippodrome yesterday—one on "intemperance" at the noonday meeting, one on "What think ye of Christ?" at the four o'clock meeting and "The Death of Christ" was the subject of Mr. Moody's discourse at the eight o'clock meeting, according to announcement, it being Good Friday night.

After the reading of the requests the hymn, "Rescue the Perishing," was sung by the congregation, and a number of reformed drunkards told their experiences. Rev. Dr. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, delivered the lecture, which was a very effective one. Mr. William E. Dodge prayed, and the hymn, "Yield Not to Temptation," was sung by Mr. Sankey and the choir. In the afternoon Mr. Moody addressed 7,000 people, and in the evening there was not since the commencement of the revival such a crowd seen in the Hippodrome. In the two halls there were more than 12,000 people, and thousands had to leave for want of room. Mr. Moody said there is one thing about the death of Christ in which every one has an interest. When a rich man dies every one is anxious to know how much he willed. Christ left a will for all of us. We can hear men talk about it, and we forget all about it in a short time. We hear good sermons, go home and forget all about them, but I hope you will get the scene of Calvary presented to you in its terrible reality some day. Oh, if I could preach as I wished and make it so plain that you would all be so interested in the death of Jesus Christ I would be happy. He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquity. Mr. Moody then told the story of the passion of Christ and the crucifixion so forcibly and well that he moved his immense audience almost to tears. His graphic description of the sufferings of the Saviour on the cross was so vivid that many of his auditory seemed to see the great scene of the redemption before their eyes. His appeal was answered by the thousands that crowded the inquiry rooms till near eleven o'clock last night. The meeting concluded with prayer by Rev. Dr. Armitage. The overflow meeting last night was presided over by Mr. McBurney, of the Young Men's Christian Association.

PLYMOUTH PRAYER MEETING.

Plymouth lecture room was even more crowded than usual last evening. Mr. Beecher was in a mood very unusual to him. His whole talk bore on the sufferings and death of Christ, and even the hymns sung were of a peculiarly dismal character. After the usual preliminary services Mr. Beecher said:—There has been a tendency to separate the sufferings and death of Christ from other parts of His life, and to attribute to them a special efficacy. The sufferings of Christ were part of His life and the climax and consummation of His ministry. He came to the world to disclose a purer and better idea of God, and the knowledge of this God is to be the instrument by which the world is to be lifted up and carried forward in a higher spiritual sphere. To have died, alone, apart from His teachings and example, would have been a tragedy more sublime and touching, in parts, than any that has ever been recorded; but it would have been simply a drama, a tragedy, and could not have had the relationship, it could not take hold of man as it has has done, when connected with His preceding life. His teachings required some such exemplification. Christ lifted the interpretation of love and duty far higher than it had ever been before. Now, it is in the nature of things that when a man teaches or preaches of things far above the ordinary experience of man it is almost a necessity of human nature to regard them as poetic, higher than anything possible among men, and no teaching becomes very powerful till it has had its martyrs, till somebody has suffered and died for it. When Christ taught duty He showed it; when He taught love His conduct showed it. When He sealed His teaching of disinterested benevolence and self-sacrifice, when for His enemies He gave up His life, there was not possible to give any teaching beyond that. Everything was thrown into the sufferings and death of Christ to make that teaching of noble sanctity to mankind and to make it an authority to every generation. Whatever effect there may have been in the example of Christ, working that way, we know nothing of it; but of the effect of the sufferings of Christ on men we do know it gives a power to His doctrines that could not come in any other way. The sufferings and death of Christ were the seal of His ministry. If there be those who can take the wings of imagination and fly back to that time and go all over it in thought and take comfort in it, far be it from me to discourage them; but if there be those who have tried to turn their thoughts to melancholy and have found no comfort in it, let me say to them it is not needful. I cannot make myself believe that for 2,000 years Christ has not been seated in heaven. Can I cry over the cross? Don't I know and death has been life? I have given a great deal of time and thought to this and have sought to be an honest man, and to hold to no old theories when they seemed idolatrous; but to part with any of a man's faith is a hard thing. It is to me a great comfort that Jesus cried out, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me!" He lost His hope, and it helps me to say to myself, Shall the servant be above his Lord. In all our experience the life, the sufferings of Christ are full of food and incitement and instruction and comfort. So, whatever befalls us, we have Christ as a refuge and a relief. If we rejoice, we rejoice with the Lord; if we suffer, we suffer with the Lord, and we shall also reign with Him.

GETHSEMANE HAS BEEN CORONATION

A meeting of the Examining Committee was held after the prayer meeting, to converse with applicants for membership.

JERSEY'S MUNICIPAL MUDDLE.

The new Board of Finance of Jersey City has appointed John B. Haight City Collector. Mr. Love, the present incumbent, announces, however, that he will not surrender the office, as he was appointed last week by the retiring Board. The most bitter dissensions prevail between Messrs. Fry and Van Reipen, the old members, who hold over on the one side, and the three new members on the other. The offices of clerk, comptroller, treasurer and corporation attorney are yet to be filled, and a lively time is expected at the next meeting. Mr. Fry having threatened to resign, several candidates are canvassing the Board of Aldermen for the position.

JERSEY'S BOULEVARD SCHEME.

Two unsuccessful attempts having been made during the past eight years to construct a boulevard to extend through Hudson county, N. J., from Bergen Point to the Bull's Ferry line, a scheme has at last been devised which will solve the vexed question. A general county road bill has passed both houses of the Legislature. It provides for the appointment of a road board by the Board of Freeholders. Twenty-five property owners may make application to the Board of Freeholders for the organization of such a board. The Freeholders will then submit to the people the question whether such a body shall be appointed. If a majority of the people at the ballot box vote "yea" the Freeholders shall appoint the board, and it shall proceed to lay out and construct a road not exceeding 100 feet in width, traversing the county from one end to the other, and not exceeding in cost $100,000 a mile. Such a road will be of great benefit to Jersey City.

RAILROAD LABORERS' STRIKE.

The laborers employed in unloading the mud scows for the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad Company, at the foot of Twelfth street, Jersey City, to the number of 100, struck yesterday for an advance of wages from ninety-five cents to $1 a day. As soon as the men left work they were discharged by the Superintendent, and about sixty laborers were brought from Paterson to supply their places. The strikers assumed a threatening attitude, but a posse of police was sent from the Second precinct station and order was preserved. The laborers on this railroad have been miserably paid during the past six months, and there have been several strikes in consequence.

STRIKING COMPOSITORS.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the employing printers was held yesterday, and reports were received from nearly all the large printing establishments of the city with regard to the new scale of prices. The reports all coincided in stating that there was no difficulty experienced in procuring compositors at the reduced rates of compensation.

MUNICIPAL NOTES.

The Tammany Society will hold an election at the Wigwam, in Fourteenth street, on Monday evening next, for the election of Sachems and other officers. It is understood that the present officials will be again chosen, with the exception of County Clerk Walsh, one of the Sachems. No opposition ticket to slate candidates will have any chance, according to present appearances.

The Brazilian Minister, Conselheivo Carvalho Borges, called upon Mayor Wickham yesterday in response to a visit of the latter, tendering the hospitalities of the city to the Emperor Dom Pedro. The Minister thanked the Mayor for his courtesy, but remarked that the Emperor did not expect any formal civic reception, but wished to travel simply as a private gentleman without any ostentation.

Candidates for the Police Commissionership, which becomes vacant next month by expiration of the term of Mr. John R. Voorhis, loom up every day. The latest names suggested are Colonel Thomas Dunlap, Mr. Sidney P. Nichols and Mr. Thomas Cooper Campbell. The Aldermen think they have done enough for the Campbell dynasty in giving them a Commissionership of Public Works. As they have the confirmatory power their wishes may receive some little consideration in the matter.

Next week the balance of delegates to the Utica Convention will be selected from this city. The Convention meets on the 26th inst. Senator John Morrissey's election as one of the anti-Tammany delegation, indicates that a strong effort will be made for recognition.

BOARD OF POLICE.

The Board of Police met yesterday, General Smith presiding. A number of transfers of patrolmen were made. The following officers were dismissed:—Reddy, Ninth precinct; Hannon, Twenty-third; Connor, First; Garvy, Twenty-ninth; Scully, Twenty-second; Kehoe, Fourth; Van Cook, Twentieth and Hogan, Thirty-third. Detective Connor, of the Eleventh precinct, was permitted to receive $50 for the arrest of the counterfeiter Knox. Officer Murphy, of the Fourth precinct was permitted to receive $75 from the Treasury Department for the arrest and conviction of the counterfeiters John and Thomas Dougherty.

A resolution was adopted making the force of the Twelfth precinct consist of forty-eight patrolmen. The number of night posts was fixed at twenty.

Rule No. 235 was so amended as to make the relieving posts as far as possible from the station houses, and to be situated, when practicable, on alternate streets, avenues and roads, and at equal distances from each other.

FIELD'S BODY RECOVERED.

The body of a tall, slim young man, about twenty-two years of age, drifted ashore on Gull Island, in the Sound, yesterday, tied by the painter to the seat of a boat. He wore a white shirt, gold studs, rubber boots, black rubber chain, which is supposed to have had a watch attached. There is little doubt that the body is that of Mr. Fields, the New Haven Post office clerk, who was drowned recently. It will be remembered that while out shooting duck he lost his oar, and the boat was drifting through the Sound, and in jumping out to get on board a passing vessel got caught by the painter, which overturned the boat and drowned him.

A DOSE OF PARIS GREEN.

Early yesterday morning Ellen Willoughby, aged twenty, of No. 209 Mulberry street, took a large dose of Paris green with suicidal intent. Her husband attributed the act to grief arising from the loss of their four children, who died one after the other last November. Since that time Mrs. Willoughby frequently indulged in intoxicating liquors to drown her sorrow. At last accounts the attending physician at Bellevue Hospital said that it was very doubtful whether she would live.

HAYTI.

THE REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT UNDER GENERAL CANAL—HIS OPERATIONS ORDERED FROM JAMAICA—INSURRECTIONIST CHARGES AGAINST THE PRESIDENT—WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED.

The little Republic of Hayti is again in the throes of one of those periodical revolutions which render any application of the Malthusian theory unnecessary and prevent the inhabitants from dying of ennui. This time the leader of the disaffected is Canal, who is at present in Kingston, Jamaica.

WHAT THE REBELS SAY.

In justification of their revolt the rebels accuse the present President, Domingue, and his party of converting to their own purposes all the money upon which they can lay their hands. To this arrangement they demur, and propose nursing the public moneys themselves. In order to effect this they have taken up arms and seized the town of Jacmel.

GOVERNMENT PREPARATIONS.

Previous to its seizure the commander of the port sent to Port au Prince for ammunition, fearing an attack on the part of the insurgents. Whether he received the needed supply or not, he was unable to prevent the capture of his command by the insurgents. Canal seems to have directed these operations from a safe distance. He remained in Kingston, Jamaica, where he chartered the celebrated steamer to carry a supply of ammunition to the neighborhood of Jacmel, where the insurgents were at that time reputed to be in strong force. The vessel proceeded on her errand, and when near the port was hailed by a party on shore, who sent off a boat to them. The party in the boat represented themselves as belonging to a large body of insurgents in the neighborhood. The men on board the Octavia, believing this, at once took to their boats and landed. They were immediately proclaimed prisoners by the decoying party, who turned out to be men loyal to Domingue. The Octavia men, being of the opinion that under existing circumstances a surrender might lead to very unpleasant consequences, at once showed fight. The mêlée did not last long. In it one of the insurgents, named Roche, was wounded and several Haytians were killed. The loyal troops seem to have quickly concluded that would be conducive to sound bodily condition, and took themselves off. The decoyed party regained the Octavia, and were next heard from in St. Thomas. Having done whatever business they wanted here they put to sea, and were finally captured by a Spanish man-of-war, as already announced.

GENERAL EXCITEMENT.

From the latest advices which have reached New York fighting seems to be going on all over Hayti. Port au Prince is in a state of the greatest excitement.

OFFICIAL NOTIFICATION.

The following document, addressed to the Captain of the English steamer Atlas, on March 22, will sufficiently explain itself and the position of things at Jacmel:—

THE NAVY.

It is, of course, funny to hear of the Haytian navy, but the President seems to have a couple of vessels capable of bombarding the port of Jacmel, if we may judge from the news received of an expected civility of that kind in store for the city. The government troops have surrounded the town. Fortunately for the noncombatants the French corvette Chasseur has appeared upon the scene and will take on board the women and children while the fire is in progress.

BLOCKADE.

Further information shows that the port is effectually blockaded. The West India Company's steamer Andean, Captain Miller, from Liverpool, was prevented from entering the port. The Captain of the steamer Atlas gave full particulars of the state of things to Her Britannic Majesty's steamer Sphinx and to the United States steamer Vandalia. The latter proceeded to Kingston to coal and provision. No further intelligence with regard to the present state of affairs was obtainable, but Canal's chances of ousting Domingue seem good.

THE NOTICE.

AUX CAYES, March 22, 1876.

To the COMMANDER OF THE ENGLISH STEAMER ATLAS, Aux Cayes Harbor:—

SIR—You are hereby respectfully notified that the port of Jacmel, now in the hands of insurgents in arms against the government of Hayti, will be, from to-night, the 22d of March, 1876, and henceforth until further notification, blockaded by the naval force of the Haytian government under my command, and you, as bearing the flag of a friendly Power, are respectfully requested not to attempt to enter the said port of Jacmel. I enclose herewith the official notification and respectfully request that you will acknowledge the receipt thereof. Very respectfully, LEON DEJOIE.

THE COURTS.

Yesterday a judgment for $15,452 43, obtained by Public Administrator Dayton against Willard Johnson, was filed in the County Clerk's office. The defendant acted as one of the sureties on a bond given by Charles T. Baldwin, administrator of the estate of Charles Breusing, music publisher. The estate of Mr. Breusing amounted to some $50,000. He died in 1863.

John R. Bruce, held for examination on a charge of passing a counterfeit five-dollar bill of the Traders' National Bank of Chicago in this city, was yesterday discharged from custody by Commissioner Shields, no guilty intent being proved.

WASHINGTON PLACE POLICE COURT.

Before Judge Kilbreth.

ARREST OF NOTED BURGLARS.

Detectives Murphy and Reynolds, of the Eighth precinct, brought to Court two colored men, named Charles Smith, alias Moore, and William Johnson, whom they arrested at No. 57 Thompson street, better known as "Africa," yesterday morning. On searching the premises the officers found several pairs of pants and overcoats stamped "H. Antler, No. 387 Canal street." On going to Mr. Antler's store the officers ascertained that on the previous evening a burglary had been committed and the property referred to stolen. In Court yesterday a complaint of burglary was taken against the prisoners and they were held in $1,500 each to answer. Both prisoners have served a term in Sing Sing Prison, and Johnson is the man who was arrested and held for two weeks in the case of the murder of Officer Byrnes, of the Eighth precinct, three years ago. The evidence against him was insufficient to hold him on the charge of murder and he was discharged. Both Johnson and Smith are well known to the police as expert burglars.

FIFTY-SEVENTH STREET COURT.

Before Judge Murray.

A NEGRO THIEF.

Officer Ryan, of the Nineteenth precinct, on Thursday night arrested Andrew Taylor, a colored man, also known as Archie Johnston, who had been found concealed in the cellar of Henry A. George's house, No. 45 West Fifty-first street. He was identified by Detective Levins as a thief who had been described and charged with robbing ex-Judge Fullerton's house of about $400 worth of silverware and other property; Sydney W. Cooper, No. 10 West Forty-sixth street, of $150 worth of silverware, a sealskin jacket and a pair of opera glasses; Croney & Co., tailors, No. 104 West Forty-second street, of about $400 worth of clothing; a valuable overcoat from Mr. Anthony, No. 19 East Sixty-first street, and a valuable lot of books from William H. Gale, No. 59 West Thirty-seventh street. A number of pawn tickets, representing most of the property mentioned, was found upon the person of the accused, and he then admitted his guilt. He was remanded until the police shall have recovered the property from the pawn offices where it now lies.

COULD NOT EXPLAIN.

Luke Eagan, of No. 440 East Twentieth street, was found in the hallway of No. 307 First avenue and arrested on a charge of burglary. A room on the same landing had been broken into. Luke could not satisfactorily account for his presence in the house and the Court held him for trial.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, April 13, 1876.

In the United States Supreme Court to-day the following cases were heard:—

No. 78. Tyng et al. vs. Grinnell—Error to the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York.—This was an action to recover an alleged excess of duties on certain invoices of wrought iron flues exacted by Grinnell as Collector. The question was whether the importations were flues, as claimed by the importer, subject to a duty of two and a half per cent under the act of 1864, or whether they were tubes, as claimed by the Collector, and liable to a duty of three and a half per cent under the act of 1865. The Court below sustained the theory of the Collector, and the importers here contend that as Congress did not make the act of 1865 apply to flues of wrought iron, the Court will not extend it, and the decree below will be reversed on their theory that the articles are flues. C. Donohue for appellant; Assistant Attorney General Smith for the Collector.

No. 210. Wilson and Bailhache vs. Cairo and Fulton Railroad Company—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Illinois.—This was originally an action to recover for services to the road in adjusting the land grant of the company at Washington and for services of Wilson as trustee. The defence was a set-off, the allegation being that Wilson had sold lands for the company and had failed to account for the purchase moneys. The plaintiffs having recovered at law, the company resorted to equity, and obtained an injunction restraining the enforcement of the judgment. It is here maintained that the bill should have been dismissed for want of equity, as any matter complained of could have been presented as a defence at law. U. M. Rose for appellant; appellee not appearing.

UNEQUAL STATE TAXATION.

EFFORTS TO SECURE A MORE EQUAL DISTRIBUTION.

A special committee of the Union League Club, appointed to report upon the inequalities of State taxation and to take measures to secure legislation thereupon, has prepared two memorials to the Legislature, which are being signed extensively through the city. The first, as will be seen below, calls attention to the necessity for reform, and cites numerous well known instances of unequal distribution; the second asks support for a bill introduced into the Assembly giving to New York city a representative on the Board of State Assessors. The following are the memorials:—

To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of New York:—

The undersigned memorialists respectfully present to your consideration the condition of the tax laws of the State of New York, and the urgent need for a reform thereof, resting this memorial upon the following, among other well known facts:—

That during the past ten years the amount contributed by the people of this State for State expenditures has amounted to $132,087,048, that in 1865 the State taxes amounted to $7,230,976, and in 1874 to $14,203,680.

That the imposition of this large sum, in addition to county and municipal taxes, is, owing to the present defective system of taxation, a burden so onerous as to become a cause for alarm and discontent—alarm on account of the crushing burden imposed upon certain interests, and discontent on account of the manifest inequality in the distribution of the burden.

That it is claimed on the part of the agricultural districts, that owing to changes in the system of agriculture, farm lands are less able to bear their proportion of the taxes, while on the other hand, the city of New York alone has imposed upon it an amount considerably in excess of one-half of the total tax raised, and that this proportion appears to them to be excessive and out of proportion to their relative wealth and value.

That an unnecessary antagonism is thus created between the agricultural, the manufacturing and the commercial interests, which is detrimental to the welfare of the State, and provocative of constant and growing discontent.

That, as is well known, a great variety of corporate and other interests, owing to the defects in the system, escape taxation; that many of such corporations exist by virtue of special laws, with exclusive and valuable privileges, the conservation of which entails upon the State a large expense, to which they contribute in some cases absolutely nothing, and in many cases a proportion entirely inadequate to the value represented or the privileges conferred.

That the unanimous public sentiment of the State acts so directly upon the officers charged with the duty of assessment as to prevent the discharge of their duties as required by the express terms of the law.

That the State assessors in their annual reports to the Legislature, and more especially in the one recently submitted, recognize the existence of this fact, and expressly declare the manifold imperfections of existing laws.

Your memorialists believe that no class of citizens of the State desire to evade their duty to contribute in just and equitable proportion to the support of the State, but that such contribution, as at present exacted, is partial, unjust and injurious to many of the material interests involved.

There is no matter, the subject of law, which so directly touches the interests of all the citizens of the State, and no law the proper execution of which more directly appeals to their judgment as necessary to the welfare of the State, and none, the prompt and cheerful obedience to which more depends upon their convictions of the justice of its provisions.

They would respectfully represent that it is a reproach to the State that any law should be on its statutes which is openly and avowedly violated, and that such avowed violation is detrimental to the moral sense of its citizens and to the dignity of the State.

Your memorialists, therefore, respectfully request that your honorable body, moved by these and other equally cogent considerations, will enact a law providing for the appointment of a commission of able and impartial men, to whom shall be committed the careful consideration of this important subject, with such instructions and authority as may seem proper.

To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of New York:—

The undersigned, citizens of the city of New York, respectfully present to your consideration the bill recently introduced into the Assembly by Hon. George H. Forster, of Westchester county, giving to this city a representative in the Board of State Assessors, and we respectfully pray that this bill may be enacted, or that some other form of appropriate legislation may be adopted which will give this city a representative and an immediate hearing in the State Board of Assessors.

The local assessors, according to a well known practice, and according to their sworn testimony, in effect, make two valuations of all real estate. One valuation may be classed as "assessment valuations," or the valuation which is entered on the assessment rolls for the purpose of taxation, and the other valuation may be classed as the "full valuation," or the valuation which is ascertained from the ratio which the local assessors have declared to the State assessors the assessment valuation bears to the full valuation. Thus, if the assessment valuation in a town is $100,000, and the ratio of assessment valuation to full valuation is one third, the full valuation will be $300,000. The State assessors, in their report of 1875, give the assessment valuation and the ratio which it bore to full valuation in 1873, according to the evidence of the local assessors in all the towns of the State, except a few towns whose full valuations were estimated by the State assessors, in consequence of no testimony from town assessors, and which estimate is assumed to be correct.

The State assessors, however, in 1874, in equalizing the State tax on the real estate full valuations of 1873, assumed that the local assessors had overestimated the full real estate valuation that year in every county in the State, except Kings and New York, and they made a deduction of $62,088,806 from the local assessors' full valuation in the fifty-eight interior counties, which operated as a corresponding disproportionate burden or surcharge upon New York and Kings counties.

We have no representative from this city on the Board of State Assessors to speak, make examinations or suggestions for us, but we have the positive evidence that in this reduction, below the full valuation of local interior assessors, the State assessors have acted in direct conflict with the opinion and judgment of 3,000 or 4,000 local assessors, who are familiar with the value of lands in their towns and who can have no conceivable motive to overestimate the full value of their own or their neighbors' property. The presumption must be, according to all recognized rules of receiving and weighing testimony, that the local assessors' full estimate is not too high; nor can any town or county complain that a valuation is too high which has been made by its own representatives without fraud or clerical error and made in good faith. Nor do your memorialists believe that this wide difference of opinion is owing to the ignorance or imbecility of the local assessors, who are generally men of intelligence and capacity. A sporadic case of imbecility might arise, but general imbecility in local assessors in nearly the entire State cannot be presumed or be considered probable.

After the annexation of a part of Westchester county to this city, the New York Tax Commissioners felt required, in order to equalize valuations in the old and new parts of the city, to raise the valuation in the annexed territory from $9,578,230 to $23,047,540, and their full valuation in the new territory was found to be far above the full valuation made the same year by the State assessors on the same property when it was a part of Westchester county. The actual "assessment valuations," as entered on the assessment rolls in 1875, in numerous towns and in several entire counties, were higher than the estimated "full valuations" made in 1874 or 1873, by either the State or local assessors, notwithstanding the great depreciation of property in the meantime. The "assessment valuation" of real estate in Monroe county in 1875 is more than $9,000,000 in excess of the "full valuation" of the State assessors made on the valuations of 1873. These, and numerous other facts which might be adduced, more than maintain the position that the full valuation of the local assessors should not have been diminished in the apportionment of the State tax.

When the State assessors estimated in 1874 and 1873 the full valuation of realty in this city they assumed that our Tax Commissioners had made their full valuations too low, and not too high, as they assumed the country assessors had done, and, consequently, they added to the full valuation of our Tax Commissioners $540,532,574. Thus, by diminishing full valuations of assessors in other parts of the State, except Kings county, and by adding to the Tax Commissioners' full valuation in this city, we believe that last year New York was unjustly and disproportionately burdened more than $1,500,000. The State assessors have assumed that the total full valuation of realty in this city is, in the aggregate, about $2,000,000,000, or more than one-fifth of the assessed value of all the real estate in the United States in 1870, and that our "assessment valuations" in 1874 were only forty-three per cent of the actual full value. Our citizens who examine and pay tax bills consider these estimates and conjectures as chimerical, and they naturally feel that the opinions of our Tax Commissioners, in whom they repose confidence as to both capacity and integrity, should not be disregarded without the fullest consultation and without the closest examination of facts to which they have access, and they feel indignant that the sworn full valuations made by local assessors in all the other counties than New York and Kings should be arbitrarily or without reason diminished, to the manifest overburdening of this city.

Your memorialists will add that New York city pays more than one half of the entire State tax, and they believe that a State assessor, a resident of this city, familiar with the value of property here, and disposed to scrutinize and closely examine valuations in other sections of the State, will be able to assist the State Board in an equitable distribution of the State burden.

The memorialists are very hopeful of the passage of the bill above referred to, and anticipate good results from the proposed change.

SEIZURE OF A STEAMSHIP.

Yesterday City Marshal Lewis Lenbuscher seized the steamship Tybee, for St. Domingo, and put two of his deputies in possession of her. She was seized for the nonpayment of interest on a mortgage for $2,500 on her, given by her owner, Mr. Leonardo Del Monte, to John H. Handren, of No. 126 Washington street, engine and boiler maker, and D. M. Ripley, his partner, and which was dated November 28, 1875. The vessel was purchased in 1874 from the defunct Samana Bay Company by Mr. Del Monte, for $20,000, subject to a mortgage of $60,996. The present charterer of the Tybee is Mr. Thomas Clyde, the owner of some fifty steamers, of No. 6 Bowling green, and who recently obtained another mortgage on the Tybee for $8,000 from her owner. This morning Mr. Clyde will doubtless pay off the mortgage for which the Tybee has been seized, or Mr. Del Monte will pay the accrued interest on it. Whatever is done in this respect the cargo can be discharged. The Tybee is now lying at Congress street, Brooklyn.

NEW YORK MAD PEOPLE.

Between the 7th of March and the 12th of the present month inclusive there were admitted into Bellevue Hospital sixty-six insane persons, the oldest of whom was sixty-nine years and the youngest six. Of this number thirty-seven were males; thirty-one were married; twenty-four were born in the United States, twenty-eight in Ireland, eleven in Germany, one in Scotland, and two in England. There were also four persons admitted to the hospital who attempted to commit suicide. If it is conceded that these four were likewise insane, there were seventy cases of insanity received into this one hospital in a period of thirty-six days, or nearly two a day.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Brokers at Rest—The Stock Exchanges of England and America Closed.

THE FAILURES IN THREE MONTHS.

Not Much Encouragement in a Business Review—An Important Reduction of Prices—Have We Reached "Hard Pan?"

Wall Street,
Friday, April 14.

Good Friday, though not legally so, is as close a holiday on the New York Stock Exchange as it is in England, under the canons of the "Establishment" itself. Its observation by the Board dates back some years, and, curiously enough, derives its origin from the action of the Hebrew element, which with a delicate courtesy and generous respect for the faith of their Christian brothers were the first to suggest the new holiday.

The London Stock Exchange being closed and the Continental bourses making at least a half holiday of it, there is no financial news by cable to affect our market here even were there any to be found. The gloomy outlook for things generally and the special disquietude which pervades stock exchange circles are strictly in keeping with the penitential season which culminates to-day. Whether brokers as a guild have been benefited in their souls, and have had their sins "purged away" in the fiery furnace of a winter of discontent, or whether they have hardened their hearts and only swear terribly, like the famous army in Flanders, is a question we are not prepared to answer. Easter, however, is close at hand, and with it comes a traditional brightness in ecclesiastical things at least; so brokers, who are ever believers in a change of luck, which is to date from such and such a marked day in the year, will have a new point of departure on which to build fresh hopes. Meantime "wars and rumors of wars" in the railroad world are playing old hob with prices. Gould escapes scot free from one of the most rascally stock jobbing operations on record under the defining of a law which is practically impossible; the great steamship companies are withdrawing their vessels for want of business, even in view of the foreign hordes which are expected at the centennial show; spring business is a shadow and nothing is sure but a plentiful showing of lean purses and deferred hopes. It is a long lane that has no turning, but a straight line has few elements of beauty about it, and a continuous contemplation of the same becomes confessedly monotonous.

THE FAILURES THUS FAR IN 1876.

In the absence of the usual quotations with which this column is filled on others than holidays, we present a portion of the quarterly statement of Messrs. Dunn, Barlow and Co., showing the number of failures that occurred during the first three months of 1876, together with the amount of liabilities:—

Dominion of Can.	396	$4,141,340	477	$7,418,030

These figures show an increase which, though not unexpected, is larger than was anticipated. Comparing the figures with those of the corresponding quarter in 1875 the result is very disheartening, revealing a very great increase in number and amount of failures; but grouping together the four quarters of last year, and comparing the quarter just closed with each, a clearer view is had, as follows:—

	No. of Failures.	Compared with First Qr., 1876.
First quarter, 1876	2,806
First quarter, 1875	1,733	Inc.. 1,073
Second quarter, 1875	1,585	Inc.. 1,225

	Amount of Liabilities.	Compared with First Quarter, 1876.
First quarter of 1876	$64,000,000
First quarter, 1875	$38,000,000	Inc..$26,000,000
Second quarter, 1875	33,000,000	Inc.. 31,000,000
Third quarter, 1875	54,000,000	Inc.. 10,000,000
Fourth quarter, 1875	70,000,000	Dec.. 6,000,000

The figures for the first quarter of 1876, compared with last quarter of 1875, do not reveal a difference so startling as when compared with those of the first quarter of 1875. There is a positive decrease in the amount of liabilities, and the whole of the above figures show a gradual reduction in the average amount of liabilities in proportion to the increased number of failures.

NOT MUCH ENCOURAGEMENT.

The figures which we present herewith do not give much encouragement to the belief that the return of a prosperous condition is any nearer, except in the passage of time, than a year ago. The business of the country, in every department, continues to be restricted to the narrowest limits; without a corresponding reduction in expenses, and in the face of declining prices of all staples, the possibilities of profit have been slight indeed. It is, therefore, not a matter of surprise that so many have succumbed to the pressure of the times; the wonder rather is that, with all the discouragement which in the past two or three years has been experienced, so many survive in a condition of apparent stability. When all the circumstances are considered it should not create surprise that the statistics of failures show a marked increase in seasons like the present. A condition of expansion such as the large expenditures of the war induced, and which a vastly increased currency caused to be perpetuated, could not take place without stimulating trade unduly, and causing such large numbers to enter commercial pursuits as to crowd all avenues of business with more than an adequate number even when trade was at its best. But now that there is but little business to be done beyond supplying the restricted wants of the people the excessive number in trade must be lessened, and in the struggle for existence the doctrine of the survival of the fittest receives a fresh illustration. It is to be deplored that the large army of traders, whose services are no longer required, cannot retire from the field except through failure. The voluntary withdrawals from business are in far less proportion than they should be, in view of the great reduction in its extent.

THE REDUCTION OF VALUES.

Notwithstanding that all the ability of this great nation of inventors has for the past three years been intent upon the discovery of some plan whereby trade can be restored to a normal condition, no theory has yet been found that exactly fits the case or accomplishes the result. The progress toward a prosperous condition, which at first was thought might be rapid, it is now generally considered must be exceedingly gradual. Still further, it is a growing conviction that a better and safer condition of trade can only be brought about by a reduction of values to their lowest possible point, and hence there are those who hail as a good sign every quotation of lower prices indicating a possibility of economy in living, and a return to rates for all staples such as prevail in other quarters of the globe. How far a restricted currency and an approach to specie payments will contribute to this result it is needless to say; but even in anticipation of that most desirable consummation the tendency to lower prices for everything is to many the most hopeful sign of the times. That this tendency is most marked there is no denying, but in order to show its extent, as compared with the prices prevailing in 1873, we have grouped together some figures which may be found interesting. It must be borne in mind that these figures are entirely applicable to wholesale purchases:—

	April, 1873.		April, 1876.
Flour—Superfine	$4 94 a	$5 33	$4 00 a	$4 65

Railroad iron	—	3 20	—	2 00
Steel rails (fish bar rails)	—	3 20	—	2 20

Coffee and sugar show very little change.

While this is by no means a complete synopsis of decline in values, the figures are significant as showing the marked reduction in numerous staples entering into the every day wants of the people. How far the same tendency is shown in real estate, in rents, freights and other essential interests it is needless to enumerate. Yet, in the face of all this decline, what is the real percentage of decrease in living expenses in 1876 as compared with 1873? It certainly ought to be much more than it is. The profits of retailers continue to bear the same relative high percentage that they did in better times; and, indeed, it looks as if a restricted trade was atoned for by higher profits, as it is certain that goods are bought at wholesale much cheaper and sold at retail almost as high as in 1873. All this must, however, right itself in time. Competition and the lessened expenses of retailers themselves will accomplish the result of adjusting the cost of living to a proportionate cost of production. When this is reached an important step toward a healthier condition of things will have been attained.

THE OUTLOOK.

There is not much in the present outlook to encourage the hope of immediate revival of business. The spring trade generally has been very disappointing both in extent and profit, and the backwardness of the season retards a demand for goods which it was thought might follow the regular season's purchases. There is, however, a steady realization from producers for their staples, indebtedness is gradually being reduced and economy is everywhere the feature of the hour. There is a general conviction that bottom has been touched, and that with the permanent opening of navigation and the necessary activities of the centennial year a new start will be made which, though not accomplishing great results within a short time will yet be hopeful in indications for the future.

SILVER FOR EVERYBODY.

The passage of the Silver bill has directed attention again to the subject of a redemption of fractional currency. In a few days everybody will doubtless have the privilege of exchanging fractional paper currency at the Sub-Treasury for silver coin of denominations ranging from a fifty cent piece downward. The bill providing for this substitution of silver for paper currency is as follows:—

> Be it enacted, &c., That there be and hereby is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $163,000 to provide for engraving and printing and other expenses of making and issuing United States notes, and the further sum of $48,000 to provide for engraving and printing national bank notes, to be disbursed under the Secretary of the Treasury.
> Section 2.—That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue silver coins of the United States of the denominations of ten, twenty, twenty-five and fifty cents of standard value in redemption of an equal amount of fractional currency, whether the same be now in the Treasury awaiting redemption, or whenever it may be presented for redemption, and the Secretary of the Treasury may, under regulations of the Treasury Department, provide for such redemption and issue by substitution at the regular Sub-Treasuries and public depositories of the United States until the whole amount of fractional currency outstanding shall be redeemed, and the fractional currency redeemed under this act shall be held to be part of the sinking fund provided for by the existing law, the interest to be computed thereon as in the case of bonds redeemed under the acts relating to the sinking fund.

Inquiries were made at the Sub-Treasury yesterday to ascertain whether instructions had been received to meet the requirements of the bill. It appears that so far no orders have been sent to the New York office, which, however, is in readiness to redeem fractional currency to the amount of $3,250,000. At least that amount of silver is now in the Sub-Treasury and it is understood to be held here only for that purpose. The government at present owns silver to the amount of $20,000,000. Of this there is coined and distributed to the different offices of the Treasury $16,000,000. The rest is in bars uncoined. It is expected when orders come for the exchange the officers at New York will be instructed, for convenience sake, to refuse silver for paper in less sums than $3. The assistants at the office in New York say that they could do very little business in the way of such exchanges if applicants were permitted to come for smaller amounts. With the system suggested packages of silver could be made up in advance and paid out on a proper check when the paper currency had passed the required scrutiny. To what extent the privilege accorded by the new bill will be availed of cannot at present be estimated, but it is thought there will be quite a rush for silver for a time at least. The novelty alone will, doubtless, cause many persons to possess themselves of the hard cash if only as a reminder of "old times." Beyond the mere momentary gratification afforded, however, no immediate benefit can accrue to the possessor of a pocketful of small silver pieces instead of so many "stamps." With the present arrangements it will be possible to pay out at the Sub-Treasury silver to the amount of about $20,000 a day in exchange for paper, and the substitution can be kept up at this rate as long as the demand continues. When instructions shall have been received from Washington that the President has signed the bill fuller details of the manner of making the desired exchange will be furnished to the public. During Secretary Richardson's term in the Treasury, it will be remembered, a feeble effort was made to resume silver payments, which was not long persisted in, but under the provisions of the new bill a far different result is anticipated, the intention being to issue silver instead of paper until all the fractional portions of a dollar shall be redeemed, as a step toward specie resumption.

CUSTOM HOUSE NOTES.

The following appointments were announced at the Custom House yesterday:—In the Surveyor's Department, for staff duty with Deputy Surveyor Burton, Inspector W. H. Benjamin, John Mitchell, G. J. Watson Jones; for staff duty under Deputy Surveyor General Nicholls, Inspector George Carroll, John Dumond and Colonel Danforth.

The prevailing topic of conversation in the Custom House yesterday was the fact that ex-Special Agent Jayne is working to obtain the pardon of Lawrence, the celebrated Custom House broker, now in Ludlow Street Jail, and recently extradited from England for forgery so that he can use his evidence against a large number of merchants of this city who are accused of defrauding the revenue in late years and of which Lawrence is cognizant.

The Collector, who has been recruiting his health on Long Island, is again at his post. He and the Surveyor of the Port, General Sharpe, will assist in the reception of the Brazilian Emperor.

The name of Colonel F. E. Howe, special Treasury agent for the past eight years, is mentioned freely in the Custom House as the successor of Mr. J. Patterson, the late pension agent, recently appointed Excise Commissioner.

LEGAL ASPECTS OF THE KILBOURN CASE.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

ACTION OF THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE IN THE KILBOURN CASE—LEGAL ASPECT OF THE QUESTION—POSITION OF THE RECUSANT WITNESS' COUNSEL—AN ATTACHMENT AGAINST THE SERGEANT-AT-ARMS—A POSSIBLE RESISTANCE BY FORCE, AND WHAT THEN?

The determination of the Judiciary Committee to advise the House not to surrender Kilbourn to the District Court, in obedience to the writ of habeas corpus, for trial on the indictment found against him is the subject of conversation here to-day, and a good deal of curiosity is felt about the action of the House on the committee's report. It is understood that three of the members of the committee, two of whom are Mr. Proctor Knott, the chairman and Mr. Lynde, of Wisconsin, two of the ablest lawyers in the House, do not concur in the conclusions of the committee, but hold that Kilbourn ought to be handed over to the Court for trial.

When White and Ramsdell were imprisoned by the Senate the law provided that, in addition to all other pains and penalties, the parties in contempt should be subject to indictment, but in the revision of the statutes the words "in addition to other pains and penalties" were omitted and the statute is peremptory that where the witness is in contempt for refusing to give testimony before a committee the presiding officer of either House shall certify the fact to the District Attorney to insure his being indicted and tried for the contempt, which is declared to be a misdemeanor. Section 104 of the Revised Statutes reads thus:—

Whenever a witness, summoned as mentioned in section 102, fails to testify and the facts are reported to either House, the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House, as the case may be, shall certify the fact under the seal of the Senate or House to the District Attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the Grand Jury for action.

In Kilbourn's case the Speaker made the proper certificate; the case was laid before the Grand Jury; an indictment was duly found and thereupon a bench warrant was issued to bring Kilbourn before the Court for trial; the marshal made return to the bench warrant that Kilbourn was in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, who refused to deliver him over; thereupon Judge Cartter issued a writ of habeas corpus commanding the marshal to bring the body of Kilbourn before the Court so that he could be tried upon the indictment which had been found based upon the action of the House. This is the writ which the Judiciary Committee have agreed to advise the House to disobey.

Kilbourn's counsel contended that, even conceding that the House has a right to punish a contempt, yet the particular case must be one within the jurisdiction of the House, and that this is not such a case; that the courts of law on habeas corpus have a right to inquire into the authority and jurisdiction under which a citizen is confined, and, therefore, upon general principles, the House should obey the writ and if the return should show a case within the jurisdiction of the House to punish, then it would be the duty of the Court to remand the prisoner to his former custody. But in this case they go farther and claim that the statute has stripped the House of all power to punish for the particular contempt complained of; that the power to punish for contempt is an incidental power at the utmost; that the clause of the constitution which authorizes Congress "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution" all powers vested by the constitution in the government of the United States, or in Congress, or in any department or officer of the government, authorized Congress to pass the statute in question, and that, under this statute, the only punishment is upon indictment. They also contend that, under the fifth amendment to the constitution, no person can be twice tried and punished for the same offence, and that, since the statute has declared the refusal of a witness to answer a question before a committee to be a misdemeanor, Kilbourn is protected by the sixth amendment to the Constitution which provides that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a trial by jury, and they assert that the House, after instituting proceedings for the indictment, trial and punishment of Kilbourn in the courts of law and since he has been indicted and demands a trial thereon, is acting illegally and tyrannically in withholding him from the very court in which they have begun prosecution against him.

Kilbourn's counsel will apply to Judge Carter for an attachment against the Sergeant-at-Arms to-morrow morning. The Judge, having issued the writ, cannot deny the attachment, and if the attachment shall be resisted by force too powerful to be overcome by the Marshal the President will be applied to to enforce the process of the court. Kilbourn's counsel contend that the President, having enforced the void order of Judge Durell in New Orleans by armed occupation of the State House of the State of Louisiana cannot refuse to enforce the perfectly legal process of the Judicial Court of the United States, sitting at the capital. They assert that the courts speak for the whole nation; and the President, who is commander-in-chief of the army, and bound to see the laws of the land executed, must do his duty.

These are the views of Kilbourn's counsel; but matters are not likely to be carried to such extremes. There is wild and foolish talk among some republicans about a possible collision between the President and the House on this question. But it is very uncertain that the House will agree to the action recommended by the committee. Many of the best lawyers on the democratic side believe that Kilbourn ought to be sent to trial.

THE ADJOURNMENT QUESTION—THE SESSION LIKELY TO BE UNCOMMONLY PROLONGED—OPPOSITION TO RETRENCHMENT AND REFORM IN THE SENATE.

The warm weather of the last two days has caused people to speculate about the duration of the session of Congress. It is difficult to see how it can get through the necessary business and adjourn before the last of June, and many experienced members believe that the session may be prolonged far into July. The appropriation bills are greatly behindhand, and it is now certain that the Senate will vigorously resist the measures of retrenchment and economy proposed by the House, and that there will be great delay over every bill. It is certain, too, that the republican majority in the Senate will oppose such measures of reform as the transfer of the Indian service to the War Department, measures which are so combined with some of the appropriation bills as to make troublesome rearrangements necessary if they should fail. Meantime the investigations go on, and time is necessary to complete these. Thus it seems very probable that the present session will be uncommonly prolonged.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

WHITLEY'S STORY CORROBORATED BY SOLICITOR WILSON—FORTY-FIVE PERSISTENT AND CONSISTENT LIARS—THE MEANS USED TO THROW THE SOLICITOR OFF THE SCENT.

Bluford Wilson, in an interview this evening, substantially corroborates Colonel Whitley. He says that he came into the Treasury as Solicitor on the 29th of June, 1874. The investigation of the safe burglary by Wilson was really begun July 6. He says that every man of the forty-five composing the Secret Service force lied from the beginning persistently and consistently all the way through.

Babcock tried to throw him off the trail of the burglars and to make him think that Whitley was telling the truth and nothing but the truth. Wilson was invited to go to Long Branch, and he went; was treated well, and heard the friends of the safe burglars tell their side of the story. But Wilson discovered in a few days that there was deep rascality behind the protests of innocence. The Solicitor had much to contend with. "Whitley was throwing sand in his eyes and Babcock was trying to hug him from behind." A committee, composed of three Senators and four members of the House of Representatives, had spent three months in investigating the conspiracy, and failed. Mr. Wilson went to Canada and secured evidence that was the entering wedge, and resulted in convicting and sentencing several of the leading actors in the burglary.

THE SAFE BURGLARY CASE—ANOTHER INTERVIEW WITH WHITLEY—HOW BABCOCK ATTEMPTED TO MANAGE SOLICITOR WILSON AND FAILED—THE USE OF THE SECRET SERVICE FOR PERSONAL ENDS—TRICKS AND MANNERS OF THE PRIVATE SECRETARY—CAREER OF MIKE HAYES.

Colonel Whitley left for New York to-day. He says that he is determined to make a complete exposé of all the facts connected with the safe burglary so far as his knowledge goes. In an interview with the HERALD correspondent before leaving town he gave the following particulars concerning General Babcock's relation and connection with ex-Solicitor Banfield and Bluford Wilson, the present Solicitor of the Treasury, in the early part of 1874. Banfield was supposed to be friendly to Babcock and the other alleged leaders of the safe burglary conspiracy, but at last, when for certain reasons President Grant insisted on Banfield's removal, Babcock, according to Colonel Whitley, stepped in and began laying his plans for deceiving Bluford Wilson, who he knew was to be Banfield's successor. Whitley's narrative is as follows:—

Banfield was not in good fellowship at the White House when the conspiracy first commenced. It had been reported in New York that he was intimate with people known to be unfriendly to the administration. Finally when the safe-burglary job came up, and it was known that a change was to be made in the Treasury, I saw the necessity of keeping Banfield there. Thinking perhaps that some of the Secret Service men would be removed and the particulars of the conspiracy would leak out I went to General Babcock and told him that it would not do to have a new man in the Solicitor's Department. The General replied that the man, Bluford Wilson, whom they intended to put in was all right; that a brother of his had previously served with him (Babcock) on General Grant's staff, and he knew that he could be handled. I made such a fight on Banfield to maintain him in position that when the time came that he must go General Babcock sent for me to secure his resignation as it would be much better for us than it would to have word go to the papers that Banfield had been removed by the President. The understanding was that Wilson could be handled by Babcock because Wilson's brother was on Grant's staff with Babcock. But the truth is Bluford Wilson was not handled worth a cent, although Babcock tried very hard to influence him.

No doubt Bluford Wilson could give some interesting facts as to how Babcock tried to work him. It was curious to see how Banfield was managed. They handled him as one would handle eggs, and in the resignation business Babcock had two objects in view—one to pacify me and the other to pacify Banfield and keep the situation under control. Banfield really did not know what was going on, although, from the telegram of the 14th of March, 1874, saying that Babcock had work for me to do, he knew that there was something up. Babcock tried every expedient on Wilson, and said that he would hold on to him and hug him to death. Wilson was seen several times by Babcock, and Babcock told him that it was all right. He said that I was one of the best officers under the government, and Wilson naturally supposed that it was so. The result was that Wilson's eyes, for a time, were closed as to my guilt, and he telegraphed to that effect to the Attorney General. It was not long, however, before Wilson began to smell a rat, and he thought that he would investigate a little further for himself, and it resulted in the discovery of such evidence as caused him to put the entire force of the Secret Service at work on the safe burglary case. Whenever I would have any talk with Babcock on the subject he would say:—

"Everything is working all right."

I had at least twenty different interviews with him about the safe burglary matter alone. He knew more about it than I did or do even now, simply because he was concerned in it. He had a deep interest in it and I had none. Neither myself nor my men ever owned a piece of land in this District. The whole point, so far as our connection goes lies simply here. Both myself and my men were officers of the government, acting under the instructions of General Babcock, and we had to obey his orders. Anything that he required of us had to be done. He exerted a great influence over the Secret Service by reason of his position. The character of his orders was nothing to me; so long as they came within our department our business was to obey. As Superintendent of Grounds and Public Buildings and as owner of much property in the District of Columbia General Babcock was greatly concerned in the investigation then going on. The Secret Service officers in no way knew either Harrington or Alexander nor any one of the memorialists. They were simply agents of the government, acting under Babcock for his own purposes. I might add I don't think that Attorney General Williams or the President had anything to do with the conspiracy. If Williams was used he was used unwittingly.

Colonel Whitley, in answer to an inquiry at this point, said:—

I know nothing personally of Shepherd's connection with the matter, but, in my opinion, he knew all about it from beginning to end. Harrington was in it, and where he was, I think, Shepherd was also. Babcock did not seem to care what the newspapers said.

About a year before the safe burglary occurred there was a movement on foot to bring Dana to Washington, and Harrington wanted me to put up the job. I think it was the very first time I ever met him to know him. He wanted me to invent a plan to get Dana to come to Washington. Babcock consulted me about it at the same time. I went to see him in reference to it at his request; he said that if I could get "the old scoundrel" over here he would put him in the Penitentiary; they took me down to Shepherd's office and Babcock told Shepherd that I was the right kind of a man to get Dana here; Shepherd turned around when Babcock said this and replied that it was a matter that he did not have anything to do with; Babcock said:—

"Well, if Whitley can get Dana over here, I will put the damned scoundrel in the Penitentiary."

Whereupon I made up my mind to have nothing to do with the kidnapping. There was another case of proposed kidnapping. A man named Raymond H. Perry gave some testimony against Babcock in the San Domingo case, and Babcock complained about it bitterly, and said that Perry had sworn falsely against him, and he had no doubt that he was a damned scoundrel. Babcock went on to say that an officer from Texas had a requisition for Perry, and that he would be glad if he could get hold of him. Babcock wanted to use the Secret Service for his own personal ends in this instance as well as in the others. It is true that I did take hold of the case, and with the requisition papers I went over to Rhode Island, and soon located my man, and applied to the Governor of that State for him. The Governor refused to obey the requisition, on the ground that the papers were not correctly made out. I then reported to Babcock, setting forth that I did not suppose that he had any desire for me to commit an illegal act, and I added that I did not think that the thing could be done. In his reply Babcock acknowledged that the scheme was not legal, and he believed that the man Moore, who brought the requisition up from Texas, was a humbug. The fact that Babcock used the detective force of the United States for his own personal benefit shows that he is just the kind of man to be in the burglary conspiracy. He wanted to use the Secret Service force to kidnap men whom he did not like, without expending a dollar of his own money for it. These are not the only cases that Babcock wanted me to enter on. I am satisfied that there are detectives employed now to manufacture evidence to break the force of the testimony to be given in the coming safe burglary trials. From information which I have received I believe that Babcock is already at work trying to extricate himself by means of his peculiar devices.

It has been said that I was paid to come before the committee in this case. It is totally false. I was subpoenaed on another matter, as will appear. When I came here I went to work to understand my status in the safe burglary case, as I had information that made such a step necessary. I found that they were gradually closing the conspiracy down upon me, and that they intended to make me a scapegoat and let the case fall through, as the statute of limitations would expire on the 23d of this month. I was to be dropped right into the pit and left to get out the best way I could. Then I resolved to give the truth to the country and save myself.

Whitley was asked about the man Mike Hayes, who claims to have kept a respectable public house in New York. Whitley said:—

Among the papers found in the Attorney General's office is an affidavit to the effect that Hayes was the keeper of a low boarding house in the Fourth ward in New York. The affidavit was made by one O'Donnell saying that Mike Hayes killed his brother. They were at a dog fight in the Fourth ward, where O'Donnell and Hayes got into a fight. Hayes, as alleged, stabbed O'Donnell, who soon after died. Hayes then fled to the South. O'Donnell's brother pursued him, and some time after came upon him in New Orleans at the very moment he and two others were in the act of garroting a man. Hayes succeeded in making his escape, and in the course of a few years suddenly turned up in New York, where he was arrested and put on trial for the murder of O'Donnell. He only escaped the gallows by a mere technicality. Not long ago Hayes met one of the witnesses in the safe burglary case, on a dark night, in the Bowery. Hayes told him that if he ever dared to go on the stand and say "that he (Hayes) did not see Whitley at his office, as Hayes had sworn, he would fix him." The first time that Hayes went before the Congressional committee to testify in the matter he swore that he saw me (Whitley) on the morning of the 6th of April, and did not say that he saw me any more during that day. But afterwards, in order to cover the point omitted, he testified that he also saw me (Whitley) in the evening of that day. When I first went before a committee I said I did not recollect meeting Hayes. I did not then know really where I was on that day. But after the trial came up I found, by the testimony of others, that I was not in New York until evening. Hayes swore during the trial that he was well acquainted with me. It is not true. I never exchanged a dozen words with him in all my life. Hayes was probably employed by one of my assistants in my absence. It is often the case in the secret service, when a man is wanted on an immediate and special job, for the assistant to pick up some one and set him at work without the knowledge of the Chief.

PROBABLE INDICTMENT OF GENERAL BABCOCK.

It is thought probable this evening that the Grand Jury of the District will indict General Babcock for complicity in the safe burglary conspiracy within two or three days and perhaps at their next meeting.

THE RECUSANT WITNESS HALLET KILBOURN.

The Judiciary Committee will sustain the action of the majority of the sub-committee in regard to Kilbourn, and to-morrow will report to the House accordingly, when a resolution will be offered instructing the Sergeant-at-Arms not to deliver up the body of Hallet Kilbourn to the Court, but to keep it and him in the custody of the House.

A NEW INTERNAL REVENUE BILL—THE LEADING MODIFICATIONS OF THE OLD LAW PROPOSED.

An important conference of the Commissioner and the several Chiefs of Division of the Internal Revenue Bureau has just completed, after several weeks' deliberation, the text of an amended internal revenue bill, a copy of which has been transmitted to Mr. Morrison, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, for presentation to the House. The conference was presided over by Commissioner Pratt, and from day to day was attended by Deputy Commissioner Rogers, Solicitor Charles Chesley, Messrs. W. H. Armstrong and Israel Kimball, of the law division; T. A. Cushing, Chief of the Distilled Spirits Division; Colonel E. R. Chapman, Chief of the Stamp Division; C. A. Bates, Chief of the Assessment Division, and A. H. Holt, chief clerk of the Bureau, each of whom offered valuable suggestions, derived from a long and practical experience in the internal revenue service. The bill is regarded as a perfection of the law, viewed from the standpoint of the Treasury Department. In type it would make about a column and a half of the HERALD.

The existing rates of internal revenue taxation, with but a slight exception, are retained, the articles taxed being substantially those in the present schedule, the variation from the old law being largely in the methods and system of collecting the revenue, the aim being simplicity, certainty and greater economy. The important and leading modifications of the old law are as follows:—

The license fee for brewers, which heretofore has been $50 for less than 500 barrels and $100 for larger production, is fixed at $84 per annum for all brewers, the figure selected being a compromise based upon the previous returns of revenue and an equalization as nearly as might be of the former fees. It was perceived that $75 per year would make an uneven amount of tax per month—namely, $6 and some cents, and the even amount of $7 a month or $84 dollars per year was agreed upon.

The gauging of liquor at the establishments or stores of wholesale liquor dealers is done away with and, instead, each wholesale dealer will be furnished with stamps, issued by collectors, on presenting his application, accompanied by a statement showing the marks, brands and stamps upon the original package.

Rectifying establishments are put in the same category as distillers as to bonds, obligations, penalties and forfeitures. This consolidation will greatly assist in the prevention of frauds upon the revenue.

The requirements now in existence as to the packing of smoking tobacco in two, four, eight and sixteen ounce stamped packages are extended to embrace fine cut chewing tobacco, which hereafter must go upon the market in the shape so familiar in the case of smoking tobacco.

The office of Supervisor is abolished and his duties are distributed between the Commissioner, the collectors and the agents of internal revenue.

The remaining sections of the law are chiefly amendments of the wording of the old, calculated to simplify it or to make its provisions more direct in their application to the purposes of the law.

GENERAL WASHINGTON DESPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1876.

HOMESTEAD AND PRE-EMPTION ENTRIES WITHIN LAND GRANT LIMITS—TEXT OF THE BILL RECENTLY PASSED BY CONGRESS.

The following is the full text of the important bill passed by the House of Representatives yesterday relative to homestead and pre-emption entries within land grant limits. The bill was passed without amendment, just as it came from the Senate, and will, therefore, become a law as soon as it receives the President's signature. It does not confirm, but, on the contrary, entirely reverses the ruling of Secretary Delano, that railroad grants can take effect prior to the reception at the local land offices and of notices of withdrawal:—

Be it enacted, &c., That all pre-emption and homestead entries or entries in compliance with any law of the United States of the public land made in good faith by actual settlers upon tracts of lands of no more than 160 acres each, within the limits of any land grant prior to the time when notice of withdrawal of the lands embraced in such grant was received at the local land office of the district in which such lands are situated, or after their restoration to the market by order of the General Land Office and where the pre-emption and homestead laws have been complied with and proper proofs thereof have been made by the parties holding such tracts or parts, they shall be confirmed and patents for the same shall issue to the parties entitled thereto.

SECTION 2. That when at the time of such withdrawal as aforesaid valid pre-emption or homestead claims existed upon any land within the limits of any such grant which afterward were abandoned and under the decision and rulings of the Land Department were re-entered by pre-emption or homestead claimants who have complied with the laws governing pre-emption or homestead entries and shall make proper proofs required under such laws such entries shall be deemed valid and patent issued to the person entitled thereto.

SEC. 3. That all such pre-emption and homestead entries which may have been made by permission of the Land Department or in pursuance of the rules and instructions thereof within the limits of any land grant, at a time subsequent to expiration of such grant, shall be deemed valid and a compliance with the laws, and the making of the proofs required shall entitle the holder of the claim to a patent therefor.

THE PURCHASE OF SILVER BY THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The Treasury Department has purchased two months' supply of silver bullion at the low rates which prevailed a few weeks ago, the average price paid having been about three cents per ounce less than the present market rate. This stock, together with the bullion fund will, it is believed, be sufficient for the coinage until the annual statement at the mints, which will be made in June.

MARY REILLY'S BIG JUMP.

Mary Reilly, of Williamsburg, L. I., quarrelled with her husband on Thursday morning, and to ease her mind during his absence at work indulged in copious draughts of beer. The consequence was that when she saw her husband enter the house in the evening she jumped out through the second story window, and is now repenting her folly in bed under the care of Dr. Moody. Her injuries are not serious.

MARITIME MISCELLANY.

Our thanks are tendered to Mr J B Docharty, purser of steamer Tybee, for favors.

SCHR HENRIETTA GREENLEAF (fisherman), before reported lost, had arrived south of La Have Banks, under full sail, with a light SSE breeze, when a heavy squall struck and hove her down. The crew were all below, who immediately rushed for the deck. She filled almost immediately. The four of the crew who were on deck had no time to escape. The captain and part of the crew, who were also below, managed to reach the deck. They immediately cut the lashings of the dories, the captain and five men getting into one boat and five men into the other, all with scarce any clothing on. The captain's dory drifted about at the mercy of the waves—the crew having neither food nor water—until 12:30 A. M. on Monday, the 10th inst., when it was picked up by the schooner Lizzie K Clark. The Henrietta Greenleaf was a new vessel of 91 tons register, built at Essex, Mass, and was on her first voyage. She was valued at $10,000 and was owned by John Green, to whom she was registered, and Mr John Greenleaf and Mr. Andrew Layton, of Gloucester, each having a half interest, and was insured for $8,750 in a Gloucester office.

SCHR ANNIE GIBSON, Shelley, was driven ashore on one of the West Indian Islands a short time ago and proved a total loss. She had been to Porto Rico with a cargo, and, failing to get one in return, proceeded to a small island to get ballast, when she went ashore. She was owned by Capt Shelley and Mr Arthur Wilson, of Portsmouth, Va. No insurance.

SCHR E L HIGGINS arrived at Providence 14th inst from Calais, Me, leaking. She sprung a leak in the 5th, and had been making water at the rate of 800 strokes per hour up to time of reaching port.

SCHR STEPHEN HARDING, at Havana April 5 from Pascagoula, experienced heavy NW winds during the first of passage, and lost part of deckload of lumber.

HALIFAX, April 14—Prince Edward Island harbors are still closed by ice, but many of them will shortly open, when a large quantity of produce will be shipped thence, the winter crop being very large.

The steamer George Shattuck, which left here on the 4th for St Pierre, arrived here this morning, all well, being detained by ice.

NEWPORT, April 14—Parties have arrived here from Block Island for the purpose of securing a diver and steam pump to assist in getting off schr Mary Augusta, ashore at that place.

LAUNCHED—At Mystic, 12th inst, from the yard of D O Richmond, a first class sloop, named Jas Lenia. She is commanded by Capt Jas Lenia. She is 48 feet long and 17 feet breadth of beam, and is intended for the fishing business.
